CNR Negro Porters Protest

WINNIPEG (CP)—The federal government was asked today to investigate alleged job discrimination against Negro porters on the CNR.

Eighteen Negro members of the sleeping car porters branch of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) made the request.

It was contained in a formal complaint filed with the federal labor department and made public here Tuesday.

At the same time, a porters' spokesman, Lee Williams, blamed the railway brotherhood rather than the company for the situation.

Mr. Williams said in an interview that the union's head office had blocked efforts to change a working agreement preventing the promotion of railway porters.

But the complaint, received in Ottawa Tuesday, accused the union and the railway of violating the Canada Fair Employment Practices Act.

EXCLUDES ALL PORTERS

The complaint said the working agreement between the brotherhood and the government-owned railway specifically excludes porters from promotion.

Further discrimination of this type against Negro porters "because of their color" had been practised for 35 years.

Sleeping car porters "had never been given the opportunity by the Canadian National Railways of obtaining a promotion to that of sleeping car conductor despite seniority, fitness, ability, aptitude and any other necessary qualifications."

The complaint notes that the porters branch has 166 employees, about half Negro and half white. White porters are similarly discriminated against.

Repeated objections to job discrimination had been made to the union and the company before, but to no avail, the complaint said.

ROYAL ARMS waved at Britain's Gatwick Airport today as Queen Frederika of Greece spoke to Prince Philip, who welcomed Queen and King Paul to U.K. for four-day state visit. Threats by Communists, anarchists and pacifists have forced tight security guard for royal pair.

Gordon Cuts Back Sales Tax Impact

Chinese Ignore Meeting

MOSCOW (CP)—Communist Chinese negotiators failed to show up at the Moscow-Peking reconciliation talks today after the Soviet Union fired new charges at Red China and warned of "dangerous consequences."

Western correspondents gathered outside the mansion in the swank Lenin Hills sections of Moscow where the talks have been held were told by a policeman that the Chinese would not be coming.

The correspondents noted the usual signs of preparatory activity at the fenced-in conference site early in the morning.

But at 11 a.m.—more than an hour after the talks usually begin—there was still no sign of the Chinese. Soviet officials began leaving the estate.

AWAITING REACTION?

The Chinese absence aroused speculation that they were awaiting Peking's reaction to a new Soviet attack. Some observers thought the Chinese might call an end to the sessions in retaliation.

The Soviet Communist party organ Pravda today shattered the silence surrounding the talks with a harshly-worded Kremlin statement accusing the Chinese of stirring up further hostility towards the Russians.

The Soviet Communist party central committee accused the Chinese of deliberately aggravating Soviet-Chinese relations at a time when the two countries are discussing ideological differences.

The Soviet blast came shortly after Soviet Premier Khrushchev snubbed the Moscow meeting with the Chinese and conferred in Kiev with Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak on easing cold war tensions. The Chinese militantly oppose Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence policy, underlined by his meeting with Spaak.

DENOUNCES SPEECHES

The new Soviet party statement denounced speeches at a rally in Peking Sunday in support of five Chinese expelled from the Soviet Union. They had distributed reprints in the Soviet Union of the Chinese Communist party's long denunciation June 14 of Khrushchev's policies.

The Soviet statement said speakers at the rally tended to create "moods unfriendly to the Soviet people."

'DO IT NOW BEFORE THE TAX GOES UP'

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon's revised budget was an "inside" job.

Now Parliament Hill is watching to see whether the product of the civil service turns out to be less of an irritant and more of a balm for the minister and the Liberal government than his June 13 budget on which he had the guidance of three outside advisers.

Some observers suggest that the graduated sales tax may spur buying of the building materials and production equipment to which the tax was applied all at once in the June 13 budget.

"A more effective implementation of the budget proposals," one of Mr. Gordon's aides called it. Other officials here used simpler language: "Do it now before the tax goes up."

Varsity Saves Over $40,000

University and school board officials today welcomed exemption of educational institutions from the 11 per cent tax on building materials.

University Development Board manager Floyd Fairclough expressed "from $40,000 to $70,000 worth of delight" over the decision announced from Ottawa Monday.

Earlier Mr. Fairclough had said the tax would adversely affect the development of the Gordon Head campus.

NEW ROADS

Today he said the exemption would allow access roads to the science building to be constructed. These roads are necessary for the moving in of science equipment, including the astrophysical dome which is now on its way.

"We might not have been able to put in the roads, our budget is that close," Mr. Fairclough said.

Effect of the exemption will be felt on completion of the lecture theatre adjacent to the science block, as well as the campus "ring road."

Mr. Fairclough said an 11 per cent tax on building materials would have increased the price of a building the size of the library by about $60,000.

BIDS BOOSTED

Greater Victoria School Board buildings and grounds chairman George Curran said the tax would have increased costs of local schools about 5 per cent. It is blamed for recent high bids on school jobs.

He said the price of construction of additions to McKenzie and Frank Hobbs Schools, agreed to recently, would be lowered.

Contractors made provisions for price adjustments in view of rumors the tax might be dropped.

"This will make it easier for us to set up the figures for our new building bylaw, too," Mr. Curran said.

WITHIN YEAR

The referendum for the next three-year building program in the district is to be presented within a year," he said.

Victoria contractors welcomed reduction of the tax in general from 11 to 4 per cent, but felt it should never have been levied in the first place.

And they criticized the "nuisance" caused by it already.

E. P. Hudson, managing director of Stewart and Hudson building supply firm, called the present situation "an accountant's nightmare."

Taking the view that half a

Applied In Three Stages

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon has knocked a $115,000,000 hole in his June 13 budget with a major retreat from its controversial sales tax on building materials and production machinery.

In a Commons statement Monday night that brought opposition jeers, he watered down the 11-per-cent tax to an immediate impact of four per cent and said the full rate won't be applied until Jan. 1, 1965.

He also exempted schools and universities completely from the tax on building materials, and opened a big loophole in his original plan to push foreign-controlled companies into selling a minimum 25-per-cent to Canadians.

It was the second major surgery performed by the freshman finance minister on his maiden budget speech. On June 19 he had lopped off the budget's bold new plan for a 30-per-cent tax aimed at halting foreign takeovers of Canadian firms.

Mr. Gordon made both alterations amid heavy pressure and a deluge of complaints from MPs and the business community. Observers could recall no previous federal budget being so widely changed by the government.

IS IT FINAL?

"Is this the final version?" Opposition Leader Diefenbaker called out at one point during the minister's statement.

Conservative financial critic George Nowlan, leading off a round of comment from opposition parties, said Napoleon's 1812 retreat from Moscow "did not go so far or so fast."

But Mr. Gordon said the changes don't alter the objectives of his original budget, and he told reporters afterwards:

"As far as the government is concerned, this is it. This is the package, we have decided to stand on."

Mr. Gordon, in his Commons statement, said the government "cannot accept" pleas to wipe out completely the 11-per-cent tax on building materials and production machinery.

But—amid opposition cries of "chicken"—he set out the legislative plan for a delayed-action tax bite.

The new tax, effective June 14, would be four per cent. It will rise to eight per cent on April 1, 1964, and to the full 11 per cent rate after the end of 1964. Manufacturers who had already paid the full rate since the budget would receive refunds.

Mr. Gordon described the tax stretch-out and the exemption for schools and universities as "changes of substance."

But he also announced a series of other amendments to ease the impact of budget measures, describing them as "clarifications"—a term which brought hoots of opposition laughter.

He estimated that the changes will cost the treasury $115,000,000 of the $155,000,000 in tax increases imposed by his budget for the current 1963-64 fiscal year. They also would mean the loss of an estimated $125,000,000 of the $455,000,000 in tax increases provided by the budget for the 1963-64 fiscal year.

Mr. Gordon later indicated this will boost the budgetary

AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE GATES

Police Quell Pickets In Greek Royal Visit

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—Police today beat back youthful demonstrators who tried to picket King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece as they entered Buckingham Palace to begin a four-day state visit.

"We aren't provoking violence," protested Kenneth Brown, an 18-year-old student. "We just want to picket the palace."

Sheltered by one of the biggest security guards ever assembled for a royal visit, the Greek royal family had a cheerful and happy reception.

The welcome at Victoria Station was one of the gayest state arrivals ever seen there. There was not the slightest hint of tension as King Paul smiled about him and kissed Queen Elizabeth and all the British royal princesses in greeting.

They saw none of the mild clashes between demonstrators and the police.

The most determined effort to mar the royal arrival was at the side of the palace.

"About 50 of our people wanted to stage a demonstration outside the palace," said 23-year-old Terry Chandler who described himself as chairman of a Save-Greece-Now committee.

"But the police roughed us up and wouldn't let us," he added.

The nearest thing to an incident between the visiting royal couple and demonstrators came in a side street near Victoria railway station.

Screaming "release my husband, release him," Mrs. Betty Ambatielos, British-born wife of an imprisoned Greek sailor's union official was dragged away by the police.

Crying and struggling, she was hustled into a theatre.

Mrs. Ambatielos was demanding the release of her husband who is serving a life sentence in Greece on charges of trying to foster a revolution against the Greek government.

Agitators—including Communists, anarchists, pacifists and other elements—say the Greeks are holding 960 political prisoners.

CRIMINALS HELD

The Greek government, says only convicted criminals are being held.

Mrs. Ambatielos, 45, was released after the royal procession passed.

Mrs. Ambatielos figured in a scrape with Queen Frederika outside the queen's London hotel last April. The Queen said she grabbed her by the shoulders.

Admitting the police had foiled efforts to demonstrate outside the palace while the Greek king and queen were hunching with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, Chandler said:

"We're pinning our hopes on tonight. We hope to march on the palace from Trafalgar Square."

As the royal party hunched all was quiet outside. With such a huge security guard it could hardly be otherwise.

Anti-Sub Network To Cover Arctic

OTTAWA (CP)—Vice-Admiral Herbert Rayner, chief of naval staff, said today plans have been made for fixed anti-submarine installations in the Canadian Arctic.

He did not go into details about these installations before the Commons defence committee, but it is understood they will be underwater networks of sonobuoys, detection instruments, to warn of any approach of Russian submarines into Hudson Strait and other channels in the Arctic archipelago.

Admiral Rayner, in a comprehensive survey of the navy's future needs, said the RCN needs submarines "as quickly as we can get them."

MAY BE FIRST

He said trials of a prototype hydrofoil boat for which a contract has just been let will not be completed until the latter part of 1967. Canada might be the first country in the world to develop an ocean-going anti-submarine hydrofoil. Cost of production models of a 150-ton hydrofoil would be only $6,000,000 to $8,000,000.

Admiral Rayner said an anti-submarine force like the RCN should be three-fifths surface vessels, one-fifth submarines and one-fifth general purpose frigates to provide anti-aircraft and anti-missile capability.

In a fleet of 40 warships, one-fifth should have anti-air capability. On this same basis,

Red Trawlers 'Menace'

OTTAWA (UPI)—Soviet fishing trawlers operating in Canadian coastal waters must be considered "a potential menace" in times of hostilities, naval chief of staff H. S. Rayner said today.

Vice-Adm. Rayner, in a statement prepared for the Commons defence committee, said the Russian fleet, which numbered some 500 vessels last year, was "well equipped for the support or cover of a number of activities of a military nature."

Their very physical presence would greatly hinder anti-submarine operations," he said.

PROPOSAL that Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg be empowered to decide all issues in dispute between American railroads and operating unions was made today by President Kennedy. Both sides have until 10 a.m. Wednesday to consider scheme. Union threatens immediate strike if railroads put in manpower-cutting work rules Thursday at 12:01, as planned.

'STERN' WARNING FROM POLICEMAN

Hiding Place In Mail Box Takes Three-Penny Stamp

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP)—From deep inside the corner mailbox came an anguished cry: "I want my dad."

A policeman did a quick doubletake and put his ear to the letter slot.

"Let me out," came the cry. "I want my dad."

Then a postman turned up with his keys and found five-year-old Kevin Spearn inside with the mail. He'd found the door to the box open while playing hide-and-seek and it seemed a good place to hide. But somebody slammed the door shut.

"The policeman told me that next time I climb into a pillar postal box, I mustn't forget the three-penny stamp," Kevin said.

Instant 'Go' on Columbia Big Vote Issue—Bennett

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Legislative Reporter

GOLDEN—Social Credit intends to make Columbia River power development the major issue of the Columbia riding byelection.

Yet, with less than a week to go before polling day July 15, Premier Bennett's big punch hasn't materialized. And at least two of the opposition parties aren't talking Columbia—power, that is.

"The big issue in this election is whether or not the people want the Columbia to go ahead," Premier Bennett said in a Victoria interview which previewed his campaign.

He said the 4,400 voters have four choices:

- Delay with the Liberals of the project for U.S. treaty renegotiation;

- Plain delay with the Conservatives;

- A completely different development plan with the New Democrats which would flood their riding's rich valley;

- Instant Columbia "go" with Social Credit.

Minister Arthur Laing will be in byelection country at Radium Thursday. Mr. Perrault says it "would not be appropriate" for him to deal with the Columbia treaty because it is "still under negotiation."

NDP Leader Robert Strachan, who has been campaigning in this 200-mile riding since July 3, says he doesn't believe the Columbia River is much of an issue because the area will feel only side effects of the big project.

Conservative Leader David Fulton, also already in full swing here, still expresses doubt that B.C. and Ottawa

Chevrier Ends Security Case

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Chevrier Monday in effect upheld the security-risk discharge of a young RCMP communications expert in 1959 and said he feels the case "should now be considered closed."

Mr. Chevrier tabled in the Commons a lengthy review of RCMP security reports and denied allegations by New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas that the young man was the innocent victim of confusion between his activities in the CCF youth movement and Communist or Communist-front organizations.

Mr. Douglas raised the case early last month in urging that the government set up an appeal procedure whereby persons branded as security risks could face their accusers and clear their names.

The identity of the young man was not given by Mr. Douglas or by Mr. Chevrier. However, Mr. Chevrier's statement says he has been employed for the last 11 years by a provincial government. Mr. Douglas said he is not employed by the Saskatchewan government.

Mr. Chevrier's summary of RCMP security reports listed a number of activities reported to the RCMP and the National Research Council, to which he had applied for a job.

MET ON FARM

In 1937 a Communist organization met on his father's farm. In 1936 his college superior was "censured" by a Saskatchewan cabinet minister for recommending him for a summer job the day after he acted as chairman of a Communist meeting in Regina. The young man admitted this act to school authorities, who expelled him.

The RCMP report said he "admitted youthful indiscretions" at age 18 and age 20 and identified three men who visited his home. The three were "prominent Communists" and two "are currently active in the Communist party of Canada."

... VARSITY

Kof is better than none, national spokesmen for business and industry reacted with mild approval.

Typical was this comment from C. J. McConnell of Edmonton, president of the National House Builders Association: "We are gratified that Mr. Gordon has seen fit to comply with this request so the industry can become acclimatized to the higher costs."

Association officials had visited Ottawa recently to ask that the tax either be withdrawn entirely or applied in gradual steps.

EXPRESS DELIGHT

Spokesmen for the exporting and publishing industries were delighted with Mr. Gordon's move to exempt from the tax materials consumed or expended in a manufacturing process.

David MacLellan, general manager of the Graphic Union, said this has "relieved many printers, publishers and suppliers from the prospect of bankruptcy."

J. M. McAvity of Montreal, president of the Canadian Exporters' Association, said exporting firms will be "greatly relieved."

"Many exporting companies—notably in metals, chemicals and papers—would have had to increase the price of their end product by as much as two to three per cent if the sales tax were applied to their expendable materials."

OTHERS CRITICAL

Other spokesmen Monday night maintained the critical view, however.

Thomas A. Somerville, president of the Canadian Construction Association, said in Toronto his group still regards the tax as a "dis-incentive" to improvement in the economy.

H. Roy Crabtree of Montreal, president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, welcomed elimination of the tax on materials consumed in the manufacturing process, "which would have been an unduly heavy burden."

"Applying the tax to production machinery in stages would help manufacturers adjust to the situation."

"But at the end of 18 months we will be almost as badly off as we were when Mr. Gordon brought down his budget June 23. His decision to retain the sales tax on production machinery will add upwards of $100,000,000 annually to the cost of manufacturing in Canada—and at this very time when our plants must remain competitive if we are to lick the bugbear of unemployment."

Donald MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the changes will supply only temporary relief. The eventual result must be increased unemployment and restriction of job opportunities.

Sarah Drunk Again

LONDON (Reuters)—Sir Winston Churchill's daughter, Sarah, whose husband died in Spain last Wednesday, was fined 30 shillings ($4.50) for being drunk in London at 6:30 a.m. today.

After his discharge from the RCAF, the school authorities pleaded for his reinstatement but "not in his old post, of course."

"According to our information, the young man was not expelled from his college for CCF activities, although two other students were expelled for this reason a year earlier and the cases may have become confused," the report said.

SECURITY RISK

Mr. Chevrier said "under all these circumstances I do not feel that the question of security risk in this case could have been resolved in any other way except in favor of the government."

Further publicity might disrupt the career the young man has made for himself.

deficit to $653,000,000 for the current year from his June 13 forecast of $585,000,000 in red ink.

It would also produce a $25,000,000 deficit instead of the expected $20,000,000 surplus in the non-budgetary old age security fund which finances the universal $65 old age pensions.

Last year the budgetary deficit was $709,000,000 and the old age security fund deficit was $43,000,000.

Social Credit financial critic Gilles Gregoire and New Democratic critic Colin Cameron both criticized retention of the tax on building materials and production machinery.

The series of budget "clarifications" announced by the minister included some sizable benefits.

He lifted the sales tax from materials consumed or expended in manufacturing processes—a step that will benefit the printing and graphic arts industries and many manufacturing enterprises.

The sales tax on building materials and production machinery sold under fixed-price contracts signed before June 14 will be exempt on deliveries up to Dec. 31, 1964, deadline that was announced by Revenue Minister Garland in an earlier "clarification" of the budget.

Also, binding pre-budget tenders submitted by suppliers and contractors will, if accepted, receive the same treatment as fixed-price contracts.

A further change means the sales tax will apply only on materials going into pre-fabricated buildings and building components, and will not be levied as well on the pre-fabricated product.

Mr. Gordon outlined an important alteration in his original budget scheme of tax incentives and penalties aimed at encouraging a minimum 25-per cent minority Canadian ownership in foreign-controlled corporations.

"To give greater stability," he said, a company's status would be determined by the ownership of its shares during the 60 days preceding the company's tax year.

Moreover, a company could meet the minimum 25-per cent Canadian standard if its shares are listed on a Canadian stock exchange and not more than 75 per cent of its voting stock is owned by a foreign shareholder

Some 10,000 workers, including about 6,000 fishermen, are involved.

Union spokesman Carl Liden said the deadline—noon Saturday for the salmon net fishermen, midnight Monday for the tendermen and 11 a.m. July 17 for the shoreworkers—were set to permit processing of fish caught before the Saturday deadline.

Government-supervised voting by the tendermen and shoreworkers won't be complete until Friday, and a union-supervised vote by the fishermen won't start until Wednesday, but Liden said the deadlines are firm.

"There will be no postponement of any strike deadline unless employers make a pre-strike offer which the negotiating committees are prepared to recommend for acceptance," he said.

He told a meeting at Edgewater that there are two "critical hurdles" to an early start on the Columbia:

The decision of Chief Justice Sherwood Lett on the B.C. Electric case in which the former owners are suing the government for better compensation or a declaration that its takeover was ultra vires.

"No firm forecast on power development in this province can be made until this decision is known," Mr. Fulton said.

Mr. Bennett will address a windup Sacred meeting at the Civic Centre here Saturday night.

"Wouldn't it be a wonderful thing," he mused, "if I could tell them that everything was settled?"

The reason he hasn't dared to come into the riding so far, according to Mr. Fulton, is that he hasn't been able to get his agreement with Ottawa signed and delivered.

But the premier said he is confident that it will happen this week.

It will be a joint announcement by Ottawa and B.C., he said.

If by some pure chance he should be in the Columbia riding at that time, "then I'll make the announcement whenever I happen to be."

What's holding things up (the terms of the agreement were completed in Ottawa two weeks ago) is the word from External Affairs Minister Paul Martin of the release time.

Complete and mail the attached coupon for this highly informative folder. You'll find that it is full of useful tips on how to make your European trip more enjoyable.

5. Amsterdam International Airport is KLM's home base. It is the only airport in the world below sea level. Its runways are 13 feet lower than a nearby canal. Boats on this canal are higher than aircraft on the airport's runways. Interesting point: Amsterdam International Airport is built on a former lake. In the 17th century, a sea battle was fought on it.

6. KLM flies to every continent and serves 44 cities in Europe alone. KLM's total route network is 144,000 unduplicated miles—the second largest international air network in the world.

7. KLM gets your reservations through fast. An automatic telegraph message center is continuously at work at KLM's home base—Amsterdam International Airport. During the year, the center will handle about five million messages automatically. Half of these are for KLM. The KLM reservations system provides KLM offices with immediate information on seat availability for any KLM flight anywhere in the world at any time.

8. Two pre-flight briefings are given flight crews of KLM DC-8 jets before every flight. Two hours before take-off they discuss the general flight plan. One hour before take-off they study last-minute weather data. KLM crews are kept up-to-date on flight safety procedures. They get one full day of training every year, in addition to thorough pre-flight briefings.

9. Every KLM DC-8 jet has two radio systems. One is in reserve. KLM's DC-8 jets are never out of radio contact with a ground station. When they leave the area of the airport from which they have just taken off, they immediately tune into the next airport. The captain himself does most of the talking.

10. KLM stewardesses know about the aircraft they fly in. Their training includes lectures on the principles of flying. A KLM stewardess has to check 21 separate things before one passenger is allowed aboard. KLM has trained stewardesses for five other airlines.

11. All KLM stewardesses are taught baby care. Capable baby care is just one of KLM's services for children. KLM has two baby rooms at Amsterdam International Airport. Facilities include clean linen, bottle-warmers, a wash basin and centrifuge for washing soiled diapers. Ground stewardesses at the airport are pleased to show these rooms to mothers.

12. KLM menus are gourmet-inspired. A typical First Class lunch on an intercontinental flight might include: fresh caviar or smoked salmon with vodka or champagne, turtle soup, choice of main course, served with potatoes, vegetables, and Grand Bordeaux, sweets and cheeses with Tawny Port, fresh fruits in season, and coffee with liqueurs or cognac.

13. Keeping inventory of KLM food at Amsterdam International Airport involves tremendous organization. Special refrigerators hold caviar, barrels of sweet Dutch butter, fresh fruit. There is a large wine cellar, thousands of dollars worth of chocolate, coffee in 10 pound tins, and all the other items KLM uses to please customers' palates.

14. Nine weekly flights from Montreal. KLM has been established in Canada since 1946 and now has offices in principal Canadian cities. Something worth noting: KLM has daily flights out of Montreal and New York for Europe. During the peak Summer season, you can choose from nine weekly flights from Montreal and four daily flights from New York.

15. Your Travel Agent will help you with all your travel arrangements. He is a specialist. He knows fares, rates, hotels, tours, documents, currencies better than anyone. And all the odd little details. His experience can make a world of difference to your trip. And, as professionals in air transportation for more than forty years, KLM recognize that it takes professionals to plan trips efficiently. # N.W.T. .... Like Communist State?

By RONALD LEBEL
OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition members charged in the Commons Monday that Canada's vast northland is administered like a Communist state or a backward colony.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said the combined Yukon and Northwest Territories covering one-third of Canada's area is "virtually a Communist state" run by the federal northern affairs department.

Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) said the British colonies of the past were administered much better than the northern territories. The territories should have their own legislatures like the provinces.

They spoke before the Commons gave first reading to two government bills that would split the Northwest Territories into two territories named Mackenzie and Nunavut. The division provides more self-government to residents of Mackenzie, the western half.

The legislation was given priority in House business at this time so the bills could be published and thus studied by the Northwest Territories council, now meeting in Inuvik, N.W.T.

MAY SHELF BILLS

Government spokesmen indicated the bills will not come up again for a while and then likely would be referred to a Commons standing committee where witnesses could make representations.

Today, the Commons resumes debate on a bill to provide the Atlantic Development Board with a $100,000,000 capital fund. Under the amending legislation, the five-member board appointed in January by the former Conservative government would also be enlarged to 11 members.

Northern Affairs Minister Laing told the Commons Monday the two northern proposals are further steps in the "smooth evolution toward provincial status."

The seat of government for Mackenzie territory would be Fort Smith, a town on the Alberta border. The region now is run from Ottawa.

The proposed Mackenzie territory council would have five elected members and four appointed by the federal government. The less-populous Nunavut territory in the eastern Arctic would have two elected and five appointed councillors.

The federal government would retain the power of the purse in both territories.

Mr. Laing said it would be impractical to go further at this stage because the Northwest Territories' 16,000 population is too small and the area is too large.

He recalled that the two proposals originally were prepared by the former Conservative government, based on resolutions passed by the territorial council.

Mr. Howard said the proposals represent "only a few feeble efforts" to break down the "central authoritarian control" exercised by the federal government.

He said it is not feasible to raise the two projected northern territories to provincial status overnight, but every effort should be bent to that end.

Research into the cultural, social and economic problems of the Eskimos should be pushed to make sure that the Eskimos will not fall into the "disgraceful and deplorable state" of the Indians.

While men should learn to respect Eskimo culture and allow Eskimos to preserve their integrity in the face of the white invasion from the south, Mr. Howard said.

Seniors All Set For Fund Drive

Greater Victoria senior citizens groups were given the go-ahead Monday to organize a $65,000 public subscription campaign to help pay for a recreation centre in Centennial Square.

Approval was given by the Centennial Victoria Square committee of city council, which will contribute land and one-third of capital costs of a senior citizens' recreation centre. The province is expected to provide the other third.

Senior citizens' groups will name a representative body to conduct the fund-raising.

The committee gave planner Roderick Clack permission to prepare working drawings for the recreation centre and civic theatre building.

Tenders will be called "as soon as possible," but this would not be before the end of the year, Mr. Clack said later.

It is hoped to take advantage of winter works aid by the senior governments in 1964.

Realignment of Pandora Ave. will go ahead as soon as some legal technicalities are cleared away, the committee agreed. This is to enable Pandora to run into Cormorant instead of ending at Government.

Space for city archives will be provided in the square project, and city clerk M. F. Hunter was named to begin collecting appropriate items ranging from artifacts and documents to pieces of furniture with historic value.

Anyone having such items to give to posterity may get in touch with Mr. Hunter.

The committee approved public display of the scale model of the completed complex.

Negroes Fight Closed Town In Washington

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A Washington state civil rights board has found the city of Kennewick has virtually barred its gates to Negroes and gained a reputation as a "sundown town" where Negroes must leave after dark.

The indictment was made today in a hard-hitting report by the five-member state board against discrimination. It was based on a 10-day investigation last May of alleged segregation practices in the eastern Washington city of 14,244.

The board said undisputed findings showed there is not a single Negro living in Kennewick while 1,200 of them are bottled up in what it called "a district racial ghetto" in nearby East Pasco.

NOT IN SCHOOLS

No Negroes were found enrolled in the Kennewick public schools nor employed in the school district, city, Benton County, state or federal offices in Kennewick.

"About six" Negroes were working for private firms in the city.

The board said it was told policemen were advised two years ago to stop Negroes at night and ask them what they were doing in Kennewick.

The city councillor who related this information was later criticized at a secret meeting of council, the board said.

The board offered a series of recommendations for action by public officials and the real estate industry to assure equal opportunity in employment, housing and public facilities.

Sit-Inner Smeared With Egg

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The kneeling white youth got a cuffing and a raw egg smeared about his face for trying to help integrate a white-only restaurant in Cambridge, Md., Monday. The older white owner completed his anti-racial stand by dousing the young man with a container of water.

The youth and other integrationists, most of them Negroes, sang their theme We Shall Overcome. The eatery will serve only whites.

Bitter feelings over separation of the races were displayed once more in several spots in the United States Monday, and in some they seethed in cloaked discontent while Negroes planned their next moves.

Integration leaders, determined to lift the color bar in Maryland, marshalled their forces for new demonstrations in Cambridge, a Chesapeake Bay town of 12,000, and Gwynn Oak Amusement Park, a privately-owned midway outside Baltimore that caters only to whites.

A stepped-up drive, too, was being prepared by Negro groups in cities throughout the U.S. to achieve greater integration in public schools—both north and south.

ADOPTS BLUE PRINT

The blue print for such a drive was adopted at the convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Chicago last week.

Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, told the meeting that such a drive is being pressed in 70 cities in 15 northern states.

In New York City, a crowd of 1,000 persons, mostly whites, gathered at a Bronx diner where racial disorders erupted for the third night. About 200 policemen broke up the crowd.

White youths were reported throwing rocks and vegetables at cars carrying Negroes. A Negro private detective told police he fired a shot over the heads of white youths who stoned his car.

The pickets, members of the Congress of Racial Equality demanding more jobs for Negroes, left the diner.

PLANS MARCH

In the Maryland dispute, a white Presbyterian minister, Rev. Robert Newbold, was scheduled to lead a march late today on the amusement park on Baltimore's northwest outskirts, where 383 persons were arrested in two previous demonstrations.

In Cambridge, about 85 miles southeast and across Chesapeake Bay, Negro leaders sought to rally support for another march to protest segregation in restaurants and other public accommodations.

About 125 Negroes and whites participated in such a demonstration there Monday night after the noontime withdrawal of National Guard units which had kept peace in the community since June 14.

The Cambridge restaurant trouble started in the afternoon Monday when 11 demonstrators attempted a sit-in. It was broken up by the restaurant owner, Robert Fehsenfeld, who pushed members of the group out of his place and locked the door.

When the demonstrators—eight Negroes and three whites—knelt in front of the restaurant and sang integration songs, Fehsenfeld cuffed 25-year-old Edward Dickerson on the right side of the face.

He said all nine Mackenzie council members should be elected. The territorial court should be retained and the commissioner should reside in the territory.

Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo) advocated better highway communications and a form of subsidy on rail shipments to the north to reduce the high cost of living.

Walter Dinsdale, former northern affairs minister, said the legislation will give eastern Arctic residents the right to vote in territorial elections for the first time.

Terry Nugent (PC—Edmonton—Strathcona) and Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) both argued that the transition to local government could be accelerated without harmful effects.

East Germans Charge Aide Jew Killer

BERLIN (AP) — Communist East Germany's supreme court today received documents intended to prove that Dr. Hans Globke, chief aide of West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, helped the Nazis gain power in 1933.

The prosecution submitted the documents in the second day of an East Berlin show trial. Globke is being tried in his absence on a charge of complicity in the Nazi killing of 6,000 Jews.

The trial was denounced by the Bonn government Monday as a propaganda stunt aimed at discrediting West Germany. A government spokesman there said all the charges had been examined by West German legal authorities and found to be wholly false.

The official East German news agency ADN said evidence was presented today on Globke's alleged participation in drafting of a law which gave Hitler the special powers he used to establish a totalitarian regime.

The prosecutor, Josef Streit, called Globke "the grave-digger of the Weimar republic."

ADN said other evidence showed Globke had a part in drawing up Nazi legislation compelling Jews to identify themselves by adopting Hebrew first names.

RATE CUT, NO INCOME TAX

Hydro Earnings Show Drop Despite Revenue Increase

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority had net earnings of nearly $14 million during the year ended March 31, a drop of nearly $10 million from the previous year's net earnings before taxes of the B.C. Electric Co. and the B.C. Power Commission.

First annual report of the Hydro since the B.C. Electric take-over was issued Monday. It showed total revenues of $137.7 million and excess of revenues over expenditures of $13,959,937.

The reduction in net earnings—despite an increase of 2.2 per cent in revenues from the previous year—is explainable in part by the changed financial structure of the authority since amalgamation.

DEBT CHARGES

Income taxes and dividends of the B.C. Electric are now eliminated but debt charges of the new publicly-owned authority have risen steeply to pay for the take-over. Financing of the authority must now all be handled by debt issues while much of the B.C. financing was by sale of equity.

According to the report, signed by the authority's co-chairmen, Gordon Shrum and Hugh L. Keenleyside, all of the excess was used to finance, in part, expenditures during the year for plant renewal and expansion for load growth.

In the previous year, the two companies had gross revenues of $133.3 million and net earnings before income taxes and dividends of $24 million.

The publicly-owned Hydro has no income taxes or dividends to pay, but other expenses showed a sharp rise. And a reduction in residential electric rates was made.

Employment costs, materials and services were up $3.8 million from the previous year, school taxes and grants were up by $1.3 million and provision for depreciation was raised by $1 million.

Greatest increase in expenses, however, was cost of servicing the authority's debt which rose by $7.7 million—from $35.8 million to $43.5 million due to the issues made to finance the takeover.

Total debt of the authority at March 31 this year was $870,816,408 — $663,068,008 in long-term debt, $110,650,400 in parity bonds and $97,098,000 in notes held by provincial agencies and others, including $40 million held in the U.S.

MORE SALES

The report showed increased sales and consumption for all services except urban transportation where there was the "usual decrease over the preceding year."

Total revenue from sale of electricity was $92,456,880, up 1.3 per cent from the previous year. Residential electricity revenue showed a drop of about $2.6 million as a result of rate reductions totalling $5.5 million while industrial, commercial and other electricity revenues rose by about $4.8 million.

Natural gas revenues were up from $22.5 million to $24.6 million and rail freight revenues were up from $5 million to $5.3 million.

Transit revenues showed a rise from $5 million to $5.3 million but passenger revenue per mile was down from 54.2 to 54 cents.

SHARP DROP

The report shows that after a number of years of heavy expansion of plant and facilities by the B.C. Electric and B.C. Power Commission, expenditures for this purpose dropped sharply during the year.

Excluding the Peace River and Columbia River power projects, expenditures on plant amounted to just $34.8 million during the past year—lowest point since 1954. During the heaviest expansion years, 1957 and 1958, the two companies spent a total of $151.3 million and $157.1 million for the years respectively in additions to plant.

The Peace and Columbia projects last year accounted for another $16.2 and $3.2 millions respectively for a total of $4.2 million.

The report states specifically that none of the excess revenues earned during the year were used to finance new generation capacity such as the Peace River project.

DIVERSION

Of the $16.2 million borrowed for the Peace project, $11.5 million was spent on the main diversion system and $4.7 million was spent on camps, clearing, exploration and site preparation.

The $3.2 million spent on the Columbia project, which did come from revenue, went for engineering and design studies.

The report notes that amalgamation of the two separate companies was accomplished during the year with the head office located in Vancouver, necessitating the transfer of 190 employees from the Victoria offices of the two organizations.

Finance Minister Gordon's Compromise, Announced Monday, Is Not The Answer.

PLEASE!—I WANT MY INCOME TAX INCREASED!

The 11% Federal Sales Tax, in its previous form, is already the WORST KIND OF TAX, as it gouges industry at its creative source, reflecting on the markups of distributors, wholesalers and retailers...

...and in the end, the consumer pays AS HIGH AS 22% MORE, plus a higher provincial sales tax on the thus increased retail price.

OBVIOUSLY, THE PYRAMIDING OF THIS TAX HAS A DEVASTATING EFFECT on the price we pay for goods.

But the Liberal Government's enlarging it at this time to apply against building materials and logging equipment, among other things, threatens the entire economy of the nation, for the PRIMING OF THE BUILDING INDUSTRY by the government in the past few years has been an important factor in KEEPING US OUT OF A DEPRESSION (and, let's face it, the unemployment picture has not been healthy in any case)?

I believe in supporting the policy of GOVERNMENT POWER OF REDISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH by higher taxation. But let's do this by increasing the income tax, which FAIRLY TAKES us after we've MADE THE MONEY—not by throttling a man's chance to make a living.

If the government doesn't want to increase the Income Tax, what about the CAPITAL GAINS TAX that has been procrastinated about for years by all Parties? Millions of dollars are being made by already wealthy people on the TAX-FREE CAPITAL GAINS "GIMMICK."

That is their good fortune—I don't mind making or saving a dollar myself.

But the rising cost of government should be borne by those WHO CAN AFFORD IT, including me. The so-called "small man" cannot stand any more. He has had enough of rising prices and unemployment.

THE ENLARGEMENT OF THE SALES TAX.

It's going to be a tough job! The Minister of Finance has deferred one issue, and compromised this one, and these two admissions of blundering may in themselves be enough to lose the Liberals the next election.

For the sake of your country's economy and mental health—those of you who have complained, COMPLAIN AGAIN ABOUT THE COMPROMISE—those who haven't "got around to it" before, please let your voice be heard where it will do the most good—OTTAWA!

The Second Retreat

BY HIS LATEST BUDGETARY reversal Mr. Gordon has not abandoned but has merely postponed the full impact of his tax on construction. But by reducing the tax from 11 to 4 per cent during the present year he has lost large revenues and thus abandoned any serious attack on the budget deficit.

This second retreat, following the cancellation of a proposed tax on securities sold to foreigners leaves the basic financial problems of the Government practically untouched. Yet in his first budget speech Mr. Gordon said that their solution must begin immediately. Not to reduce the Diefenbaker scale of deficits, he warned, would be irresponsible. Unless Mr. Gordon's spending plans are reduced the budget deficit this year may be as large and irresponsible as it was in the former government's last year and quite possibly larger.

Mr. Gordon's debacle does not result from lack of ability. It results from inexperience and haste. Moving too fast, he has been compelled to change his mind but only at the expense of undermining public confidence in any policies that he may propose later on. And obviously new policies will be needed since the present emasculated budget has become only a temporary makeshift.

On the specific question of the sales tax on construction second thoughts are needed especially. If the tax was sound in the first place it should not be abandoned. If it is now judged unsound (as was suggested here when it was introduced) it should be dropped and replaced by other taxes less injurious to business, for assuredly the Government needs additional revenue.

Mr. Gordon does not make such a clear decision. He tries to compromise and falls between two stools. He has alarmed investors unnecessarily but failed to improve his budgetary position.

Clearly, after sorting out the present confusion, the Government should reassess its financial problems from the beginning and be prepared by autumn to introduce a new budget. It is certain to prove widely unpopular, whatever its contents may be, since the financial dilemma accumulating over six years of Conservative administration cannot be solved by any easy means. But a new budget can be sound if it is carefully devised by a competent minister of finance.

Despite his great talents and fine sincerity Mr. Gordon has proved that he is not that man. His replacement by a stronger minister should be Mr. Pearson's next order of business.

All-Sooke Day

ONE OF THE FEW AUTHENTIC loggers' sports meets available to local folk will be held next Saturday when large numbers of Victorians will attend All-Sooke Day. The enthusiasm and vigor of the Sooke Community astonishes visitors each year, and Sooke has justly earned fame for its popular annual display.

The word this year was that it was difficult to recruit workers for the job of preparing the grounds.

But apparently this problem has been overcome and a grateful public should show its feelings by attending and supporting the event.

It would be a distinct loss to Greater Victoria's residents and tourists if this "Day" were to lapse. Southern Vancouver Island owes a debt of gratitude—to be paid by eating the barbecue and watching the sports—to the workers who give their time and energy to the thousand-and-one background details that make it such a success.

Decimal, But Not Simple

WHEN AUSTRALIA CHANGES over to decimal currency in 1966, its main unit will be called not a dollar, but a "royal," according to present decisions.

The complete range of new values and names will be the royal, worth 100 cents; the crown, 50 cents; the florin, 20 cents; the shilling, 10 cents; and five, two and one-cent pieces.

The same units and names are expected to be followed in New Zealand. People who have been using decimal coinage for generations will probably heave a sigh of relief, believing that conversion of the various currency will require, on their part, only some facility with the ten-times-table.

Like most over-simplifications, nothing could be more misleading. Figured out what a Hong Kong dollar's worth in Canadian money recently?

Shuffle Up a Story

SIMON AND SCHUSTER HAVE announced something novel in the novel for this fall.

The work of the French Marc Sports, it consists of unbound, unnumbered pages in a cardboard envelope. The reader is asked "to shuffle these pages like a deck of cards. The order the pages then assume will decide the fate of the novel's protagonist."

The novel, according to the publisher's statement, "is based on the author's belief that time and the order of events control a man's life more than the nature of such events."

This could be the all-time bargain buy of literature, on the basis of permutations and combinations. A purchaser acquires an envelope full of pages. He shuffles them and has a story. He shuffles them again and has another and so on almost ad infinitum.

How all this comes out as fiction, we don't know. But on the basis of shuffle-and-try-again, it helps us to understand why some games of solitaire are known as "Idiot's delight."

After this, "Finnegan's Wake" is going to look simpler than Mother Goose.

Civil Rights Splitting Republicans

CIVIL rights long since divided the Democratic Party into hostile northern and southern wings. And now the mounting racial crisis promises to cause an equally bitter division in the Republican Party.

As yet, only the first grumblings and mutterings of the coming battle are to be heard in various Republican quarters. But on a recent form, it is a reasonable prediction that the next Republican convention will be dominated, and its outcome may be decided, by a knock-down-drag-out fight about the Republican stand on civil rights.

There are three reasons for this prediction. In the first place, the recent Republican rally at Denver rang with sanguine discussion of the Republican Party's chance of victory as a "white man's party," with the hero of the Southern conservatives, Sen. Barry Goldwater, as its standard-bearer.

Secondly, both sides have already thrown down their gauges of battle—although surprisingly little attention has been paid to this striking fact.

Sen. Goldwater, for his part, while saying that he was for some sections of President Kennedy's civil rights bill, has taken his stand four-square with the Southern Democrats on the guts of the matter. In other words, he has attacked the proposal to desegregate public facilities as an offense against states' rights, and he has sworn that he will never vote for cloture to get a civil rights bill through the Senate.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York has responded to Goldwater by coming out for the entire civil rights bill without qualification, and urging all Congressional Republicans to support it. In reality, Gov. Rockefeller now conceives his fight for the Republican Presidential nomination quite largely in terms of a fight against the "white man's party" theory.

Third—and most important of all, the presidential aspirants are not the only leading Republicans who are squaring off for the fray. The extremely able and astute Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania is a declared non-candidate. But he is also grimly determined to use every Pennsylvania delegate to block the Republicans who want the 1964 election to be a "lily white versus liberal fight."

This was a primary motive, in fact, of Gov. Scranton's decision to become a favorite son candidate, and thus to establish iron-clad control of Pennsylvania's large convention delegation. The other motive was the Governor's desire to teach a lesson to the Republicans who have been saying the "northeast can be written off"—who are precisely the Republicans talking about a "white man's party."

In every one of the states with large convention delegations—the need to make the choice already made by Gov. Scranton is also causing heart-searching and position-taking.

In California, to name the most notable example, a primary fight is rather plainly shaping up. A pro-Goldwater delegation is already in formation. And the more moderate California Republicans are already pressing Sen. Thomas Kuchel to stand as California's favorite son at the head of a moderate delegation, if this is needed to whip the Goldwaterites.

Every kind of attempt will of course be made to blur the issue which has just begun to divide the Republicans, as it has already divided the Democrats. It will be pointed out, with pious indignation, that Sen. Goldwater is no racist, which is certainly true; and much will be made of the fact that as a young man, he helped to desegregate the Phoenix, Ariz., school system.

But in the present context, these facts are almost as irrelevant as the fact that Goldwater is an extremely pleasant human being. He advocates a Republican strategy primarily keyed to an appeal to Southern conservative votes. He wants his party to put states' rights above civil rights.

If the Republican Party nominates a standard-bearer who is against civil rights for all practical purposes, the Republican Party will then, quite unavoidably, assume the role of the "white man's party."

But this is a moral decision as well as a political decision; and it is to be hoped that a majority of Republicans will see it that way.

As Our Readers See It

Serious Error

One of your correspondents has quite rightly and logically asked why, if I have condemned Mr. Salgo's murals as artistic failures, the Art Gallery a few years ago sponsored an exhibition of his oil paintings.

Out of ordinary courtesy to a foreign artist I have not mentioned this matter, but I now feel obligated to explain that our gallery, along with other civic galleries in western Canada, booked Mr. Salgo's exhibition on the basis of high recommendations.

Once Mr. Salgo had hung his paintings we realized we had made a serious error, and that the quality of his work was not up to the standards we endeavour to maintain for circulating exhibitions.

To have removed his works from our walls, as many people were urging us to do, would have been extremely discourteous to a guest. Our view of his painting was, however, shared by the other Canadian curators, at least one of whom cancelled his exhibition, while another regretted that he had not.

Mr. K. and the Class Struggle

Nikita Khrushchev says "we are in favor of class struggle," and in view of the fact that at least two classes are needed for a struggle, it is strange that he is so one-sided about this in his own areas of jurisdiction. He does not legally allow wage-workers in Russia and most satellite countries to withhold their labor power in the incessant struggle with the bosses over the wealth produced by the useful class.

On the other hand he is doing the right thing for continued struggle by not allowing Russian proletarians to organize a Socialist party, if they wanted to, for the purpose of co-operating with other workers to establish a world democracy of free and equal citizens, producing according to ability and consuming according to needs or wants.

This would bring an end to the class struggle, which would be anathema to someone as dedicated to capitalism as Mr. K. is.

Church and State

The scriptural answer to "The Separation of Church and State," page 3, July 6, is that the Bible presents two gospels in the makeup of the Kingdom of God viz:

- (1) The Gospel of Personal Salvation—a system of redemption and worship under ecclesiastical administration. The New Testament, especially, emphasizes Jesus Christ and His mission, particularly in the epistles. This gospel is epitomized in the Apostles' Creed and the canticles contained in the Book of Common Prayer.
- (2) The National Message of the Bible under Divine Law—is composed of Commandments, Statutes and Judgments. These comprise the material and temporal national constitution, the administration of which is the duty of the legislator, the statesman and the judiciary—not the preacher.

These two gospels, while different in their respective spheres of action, are complementary branches of God's overall plan inextricably woven for the eventual establishment of His Kingdom on earth.

Under the Wraps at Moscow—Fission Within the Soviet World

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

MORE THAN three years have gone by since it was possible to print the inside story of the Bucharest and Moscow conferences of 1960. It was then quite clear that current speculation about the possibility of a split between Moscow and Peking was already outdated. The split, though still concealed from the outer world, had taken place.

It was at Bucharest in July, 1960, that the Chinese accused Mr. Khrushchev personally of revisionism and of sacrificing the Communist world in general and China in particular to Soviet state interests. It was at Bucharest that Khrushchev accused Mao Tse-tung of taking after Stalin, of being oblivious to any interests but his own and of spinning theories remote from the realities of the modern world.

It was at Moscow in November, 1960, in the teeth of almost unanimous opposition from the assembled delegates of 51 Communist parties that the Chinese Party Secretary Teng Hsiao-ping defiantly claimed China's right to form a "fraction" as Lenin had done before them (when he split the Russian Social Democratic Party into Bolsheviks and Mensheviks in 1903) and to convert others to their view. This was the formal challenge to Soviet leadership of the international Communist movement. It is Teng who is leading the Chinese delegation to Moscow at this moment.

Nothing since then has occurred to change the position, although it was not until last winter that China was attacked by name. But in March of this year, Peking's challenge was formally renewed, this time in the form of a threat. The People's Daily of March 1 found a way of dramatizing that challenge which sent a shiver down the spine of every Communist.

The most evocative words in the Communist litany are in the opening sentence of the 1948 Communist Manifesto: "A spectre is haunting Europe—the spectre of Communism."

The Chinese variant, addressed to the "revisionists," to Khrushchev, ran: "A spectre is haunting the world—the spectre of genuine Marxist-Leninism. . . and it threatens you. . . You have no faith in the people, and the people have no faith in you. You are divorced from the masses. That is why you fear the truth."

China was then attacking hard, exploiting Khrushchev's Cuban fiasco for all she was worth. Something had to be done, and quickly, to avoid a formal and open breach—or at least to ensure on the part of the Russians that the Chinese would be saddled with the blame for it, and vice versa. The arrangements of the meeting of July 5 were the outcome.

But the situation is past repair. It is not a question of whether henceforward there will be two Communist Romes. There have been two Romes since November, 1960. It is a question of how long the Soviet Union can go on presenting itself as the fit leader of any worldwide revolutionary movement.

The question is as complicated as it is possible to imagine. It is also heavily obscured by the terms in which the dispute is being conducted. It started as a quarrel about power, and it will end as a quarrel about power. But power is hopelessly mixed up with ideology and heresy-hunting in a way that confuses Moscow and Peking as well as us. And, of course, the guardianship of the ark of the true faith is itself an element of power in a world everywhere peopled, in some places densely, with true believers (there are more of these, it should be remembered, outside the Soviet bloc than inside). Russia has need of them; China is out to get them.

It began long before Khrushchev. The fact that the Chinese are conducting the quarrel as though it were a personal vendetta between Mao and Khrushchev obscures the truth: with Khrushchev out of the way (a strong man with ideas of his own) they certainly feel they could manage Russia more easily. But the enemy is Russia, not Khrushchev. People used to ask whether, one day, the Chinese might perhaps go the way of Yugoslavia, with Mao taking a leaf out of Marshal Tito's book. But Communist China has always been, from the very beginning, a Yugoslavia on a great scale, in that Peking was beyond Moscow's control.

Mao made his revolution in 1949 against the advice of Stalin, and almost at once Chinese propagandists were declaring that "Mao's way" was not only a brand new contribution to Communism but also the model for all backward and under-developed lands.

Because China was for a time so dependent upon the Soviet Union and because it was overwhelmingly in the interest of both countries to present a united front to the world; because, too, Stalin, in Chinese eyes, was a genius and the unquestioned heir to Lenin, because, finally, Mao quite agreed with Stalin that in the early years of the revolution China could not be considered a fully fledged socialist state (on a par, say, with Poland!) the latent and actual differences were covered up.

But it was inconceivable that this proud and antique land with its inborn contempt for Europe would ever subordinate itself to European Russia, as the European satellites were once subordinate. The challenge might have been delayed for a long time, but sooner or later it had to come. After 10 years of Communist rule, with the Koreans war behind them, with Stalin dead, with his successors exhibiting a hand-to-mouth opportunism which had little to do with Leninist theory and the pursuit of world revolution, and a great deal to do with increasing the strength, prosperity and security of the Soviet Union, with Khrushchev, as it were, unilaterally amending Leninist theory to this end, the Chinese felt it was time they made their weight felt. This was early in 1959, at the time of the great leftward swing, the introduction of the communes and the Great Leap Forward, both derided by Khrushchev (who also feared they would capture the imagination of the people of Asia, Africa and Latin America).

At first all the Chinese wanted was to be recognized as equals. But this in itself was more of a challenge than they realized. Whatever Stalin may have been, Khrushchev was clearly no man to lay down the law in detail to one of the proudest peoples in the world, a people, moreover, with a special interest in Asia. Yet how could Russia treat them as equals without surrendering their freedom of movement—the cherished and necessary freedom of movement of a very Great Power which also, for 40 years, had been the law-giver for the great secular religion of our time?

The nearest they got to it was at the Moscow Conference of December 1958, when Russia and China jointly sponsored the portentous policy document known as the Moscow Declaration, and bullied lesser and more sophisticated parties into signing it.

It was a brief honeymoon. Certain clauses in that declaration meant one thing to the Russians, another to the Chinese; and this was soon apparent. In the critical year 1959 a number of things happened. Khrushchev refused to support Mao in the matter of the off-shore islands, refused to give him atomic weapons, refused to back him in the Indian border affair, refused to interfere in Iraq when America and Britain carried out their landings in Jordan and the Lebanon.

All this at a time when, or so the world believed, the Soviet Union had a lead over the United States in rocketry; the Chinese expected them to exploit this strength, and said so.

Worst of all in Chinese eyes, Khrushchev showed himself more interested in getting on with General Eisenhower than in standing up for the Cause. And all the time material aid was being lavished on neutralist governments—aid which the Chinese thought should go to active Communists, often persecuted by those same governments, and to them.

It is impossible to tell just when Mao decided to make his bid for the support of world Communist opinion. But it was effectively made at the Moscow conference of 1960, and it failed quite abjectly. Since then we have been able to watch not so much the progress of the dispute, which is circular, but, rather, the strenuous efforts of both parties to it to convince the fraternal parties of the justice and expediency of their cause.

Khrushchev's strongest card was China's recklessness in face of the nuclear threat. He played it for all his worth, distorting the Chinese attitude in the process, playing on the fears of Communists everywhere, who do not wish to be blown into eternity any more than we do.

China's strongest card has been her ideological purity—at any rate on paper—and her obvious revolutionary zeal. In practice, she has shown herself no less opportunist than Russia; but she has the sacred texts on her side, whereas Khrushchev has to invent his as he goes along.

She can also quite effectively present herself as the active champion of struggling revolutionaries all over the world, undeterred by craven fears of local wars of rebellion escalating into a major war of nuclear annihilation.

But although the real issue is China as a Power versus the Soviet Union as a Power, although talk of war and peace and coexistence blurs this issue, and although very little weight should be given to ideological pedantries (Communists, like Christians, can usually find a text to justify their actions), the ideological issue is a very real one.

The Soviet party and some of the more sophisticated European ones, perhaps others too, are engaged in transforming Leninism into something quite different—the Poles and the Italians in the van. Yet how can it be transformed, how can polycentrism be established, without destroying Russia's special position in the world and depriving her of much of her power?

Khrushchev must at all costs seek to maintain Moscow's moral authority over a world-wide movement. But this movement depends on unifying purposeful action under central leadership—action which, if pressed to its logical conclusion, will sooner or later lead to universal catastrophe.

The Chinese are saying, in effect, to Moscow, if you will not provide the leadership, then we shall. And the really interesting question at the moment, with the Communist monolith already shattered, is whether Chinese action, as is generally supposed, will act as a check to the rational development of the Soviet Union and her closest allies, or whether it may not, sooner rather than later, accelerate the processes of fission within the Soviet world itself.

Gerald Waring ... REPORTING

OTTAWA — The Papuans of West New Guinea and the Eskimos of northwestern Quebec are both primitive peoples emerging from Stone Age cultures.

What happened to the Papuans shouldn't happen here. But it may.

The interests of the Papuan people were betrayed by the United States and the Netherlands last year to appease the Indonesians and other Afro-Asian powers. The Indonesians took over West New Guinea from a transitory United Nations administration on May 1, and while they are committed by treaty to hold a plebiscite of the residents of the former Dutch colony by 1969, no one believes Jakarta would let the Papuans choose independence.

In the case of the 2,500 Eskimos who form the bulk of the population in northwestern Quebec—along the coast of Hudson Bay and Hudson Strait—the political power demanding appeasement isn't the Afro-Asian group, but the Quebec neo-nationalists. The effective leader of this group is Rene Levesque, the minister of natural resources in Premier Lesage's Liberal government. He is the Dr. Sukarno of this confrontation of Quebec and Ottawa, with the Eskimos—like the Papuans—unhappily in the middle.

What Levesque wants is for the federal government to turn over administration of Eskimo affairs in Quebec to the provincial government, but to continue paying the cost.

The minority government in Ottawa needs Quebec support, so Levesque was emboldened to put forward his proposal as a preemptory demand. Like Sukarno to the Dutch, it was "get out—or suffer the consequences."

The Eskimos have never been wards of the Crown, but Ottawa long ago accepted responsibility for them when the Supreme Court ruled Eskimos are legally Indians. After decades of official neglect, Ottawa has developed an aid program since the Second World War that is counteracting the cultural and economic dislocation of the Eskimos caused by the impact of white civilization. This must not be sacrificed to placate the Quebec nationalists.

There is no issue of Ottawa neglecting Quebec Eskimos. What burns Levesque's britches is the fact that those Quebec Eskimos who have a second language speak English and not French.

This is a result of their education in earlier days in Anglican mission schools, and the fact that government schools have continued instruction in English. This is not federal perversity: English is the common language of the Arctic; particularly useful because the Eskimos speak many dialects from Baffin Island to Alaska. French-speaking Eskimos would only compound the problem of communication with and among the native people.

Levesque was in Ottawa 12 days ago to press his demands on Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing. He proposed that Laing turn over intact the whole federal machinery for Quebec Eskimos, including federal buildings, supplies, and the $1.7 million a year that Ottawa now spends on these natives. A suggested target date is Sept. 1.

Levesque didn't get Laing's agreement even in principle. Laing told him in a brusque, no-nonsense way that he'd agree only to have a committee of federal and provincial officials study the problem.

It would be interesting to know what the Quebec Eskimos think of Levesque's proposal. A plebiscite would be helpful, perhaps—but please, before the fact, not in 1969.

HOME GARDEN

By HILDA BEASTALL

Don't Neglect the 'Mums

The home gardener who buys a dozen or so young chrysanthemum plants each spring is concerned with having them grow quickly and be ready to bloom when the days get cooler and shorter.

It is truly amazing to see by late August the large plants just coming into bloom, and remember the tiny rooted cuttings which were put out in May.

These results are not reached if they are neglected during the summer.

Almost more than any other short-lived plants, the chrysanthemum requires a rich, humus-filled soil to begin with, ample watering and frequent additional feedings of fertilizer.

Any form of mulch around the plants will help in keeping the soil from becoming dry—grass clippings, old hay, half-rotted compost or even well-saturated coarse peat if it is two inches or more thick.

Fertilizer for garden chrysanthemums needs to be well-balanced, for the aim is a mass of fibrous roots; strong, straight stems and abundant flowers of good texture and color.

A dry fertilizer such as 5-10-5 or 6-6-6 can be used in a solution of one teaspoon to a gallon of water. A cupful of liquid to each plant at seven-day intervals will not be too much, but care should be taken by the amateur not to increase the strength of the solution.

When color begins to appear in the flower buds, cease the feeding but maintain the watering.

The huge chrysanthemum flowers grown one to a stem as seen in fall shows do not appear by chance nor will they occur on plants of the same varieties unless the art of disbudding is learned from practical growers.

Allowed to grow as sprays, early-flowering chrysanthemums will produce abundant blooms for garden decoration and cut blooms for the house.

Way Cleared For Malaysia Independence

LONDON (AP) — The way is clear for formation of the federation of Malaysia around the South China Sea Aug. 31. But Brunei and its oil wells are staying out.

Britain early today signed a treaty with the four Commonwealth territories that will form the federation—Independent Malaya, the self-governing island colony of Singapore and the Borneo territories of Sarawak and British North Borneo.

The West sees Malaysia as a buffer zone against Communist expansion in Southeast Asia. The crescent-shaped federation of 130,818 square miles extends from the border of Thailand to within reach of the Philippines. It includes 10,000,000 persons and is rich in tin and rubber. Singapore boasts one of the busiest ports in Asia and is the site of a huge British military complex.

In the Russian view, given today by Tass news agency, Britain "hopes to use the new federation to preserve the positions of British imperialism and combat the national liberation movement in Southeast Asia."

There were two versions of why British-protected Brunei, tiny sultanate on the Borneo coast, balked at the last moment. It had agreed to join when negotiations began a year ago.

REFUSES TO SIGN

Malayan Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman, architect of the federation, said agreement had been reached on all technical matters but Sultan Omar Ali of Brunei refused to sign the treaty because he was not given precedence over rulers of the other states.

A spokesman for the Brunei delegation denied this. He said the disagreement was over how much of Brunei's oil revenues should be paid into the Malaysia federal treasury.

Negotiations had been delayed by disputes on financial arrangements and also by an abortive uprising by Brunei rebels last December against participation in the federation.

Commonwealth Secretary Duncan Sandys signed the treaty for Britain.

Prime Minister Macmillan said: "Malaya and Singapore have provided the success story of free Asia. We hope this story will continue on a larger scale."

The federation's capital will be at Kuala Lumpur in Malaya and Rahman, a strong anti-Communist, will be its first prime minister.

WHITE WOMEN PROTEST S. AFRICAN HOLIDAY

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—Hundreds of white women belonging to the Black Sash Organization turned out Monday for a one-day silent protest in protest against the third celebration of Family Day in South Africa.

Their protest was directed at what they described as the "cynicism" of proclaiming a national holiday under that name in a country with a policy of racial separation. Family Day was instituted in 1961, changing the name of the annual holiday, formerly known as the Queen's birthday. South Africa, a republic, has left the Commonwealth.

Members of the Black Sash, mainly English-speaking white women, have periodically staged non-violent demonstrations against the nationalist government's racial policies since their organization was formed in 1955. Its members wear a black sash of mourning for "lost civil liberties."

Quebec Stalls School Bill

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage announced today that the Quebec government does not intend to adopt legislation this session creating a ministry of education. But he emphasized the bill is not being withdrawn and will be presented again next session.

The premier noted that many groups had asked that adoption of the bill be put off so that it could be studied in detail.

The essential provisions of Bill 60 would bring Quebec's public schools under the authority of a government department headed by a cabinet minister and would set up a 24-member advisory council, known as the Superior Council of Education and comprising representatives of the churches, parents, teachers' organizations and the public at large.

The schools now are run by separate Roman Catholic and Protestant committees of the council of public instruction, whose 66 members are appointed for life.

The action proposed by Bill 60 was recommended in a report of the Quebec royal commission on education.

Douglas Asks Press Probe

OTTAWA (UPI)—New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas called Monday for the establishment of a royal commission to probe into the control and operation of Canada's daily newspapers.

Douglas told the Commons such an inquiry was necessary because of the "increasing concentration" of control over newspapers in this country.

He made no direct reference to it, but Douglas' query apparently was sparked by the week-end announcement that Free Press Publications had bought controlling interest in the Vancouver Sun.

Summaries Promised

OTTAWA (CP)—The justice department plans to return to the pre-1957 practice of summarizing in press releases findings and recommendations of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, Justice Minister Chevrier informed the Commons Monday.

'Stable' Nations Becoming Shaky

OSLO, Norway (AP)—Political crises are jarring three Scandinavian governments these days, swinging this normally stable corner of the world into line with other European nations.

The Norwegian government has been placed in jeopardy by an attack from opposition parties on conditions in a state-owned coal mine on Spitsbergen and government handling of a report on a November explosion in the mine which killed 21.

The Danish government has just suffered a stinging rebuke at the hands of the voters in a plebiscite intended to give the state more control over land.

The Swedish government has a spy case on its hands, with opposition leaders declaring that the fact a Swedish officer was able to operate as a Soviet agent for 15 years forms the basis of a no-confidence vote.

Of the three, the Swedish government is the one least likely to fall because of present troubles. Opposition leaders and press insisted the government had shown negligence.

But they settled—at least for the time being—for demanding a parliamentary commission to investigate the case, rather than the judicial commission already appointed by the Socialist government of Prime Minister Tage Erlander.

NEW YORK—The Christine Keeler case is getting so filthy that I don't like to soil my typewriter fingers touching it.

"Here's a news story," I was telling myself, "that maybe I should work on. But—Ugh! Do I really want to? Will it help anybody? Won't I get dirty doing it?"

The worst is, it will get worse.

Great energy's being spent to drag Americans into it—top actors, singers, jazz musicians and, of course, politicians.

A "detective," for example, is mysteriously operating in N.Y. trying to peddle his "intimate story" about a call girl who turned very rich and became something of a name.

FOR A PRICE

"I've got 60 tape recordings," he whispers—then "prove" that a rich, eminently respectable American of some fame induced her to have an abortion. His excuse for being willing to confide this to the world? It's all part of "the international vice ring" which he'd like to expose—for a price.

Our own Broadway world's been changed by this scandal. "See So-and-So over there?" I heard somebody say. "He's just been called in by the FBI."

"What about Pat V...," that call girl who committed suicide recently? She knew Christine. Did she know about this breaking?

All day long we hear strange talk... flagellations... transvestites (some astounding) but Britishers went in for that... duchesses with camera fetishes... and "the Man in the Mask"... buzz, buzz, buzz. Don't tell anybody but it's 95 per cent sure that it's... but never mind.

This is the Sick, Sick, Sick, Sick Sixties. England so far is ahead of us in its public sickeriness in high places. England after all is more "sophisticated"—we're still a little slow and stupid over here in "the Colonies." Will we wise up? Let's hope not!

Its membership includes 17,000 or 75% of all the veterinarians in North America. Incidentally, the oldest veterinary school in the U.S. is the College of Veterinary Medicine at Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa. It was founded in 1879 and is still going strong.

Mandy Denies Death a Fraud

LONDON (AP)—Call-girl Mandy Rice Davies said today rumors that a shadowy figure in the Profumo scandal faked death and is still alive are false.

Peter Rachman, benefactor of Mandy and Christine Keeler, was reported to have died last fall shortly before the Keeler-Profumo scandal began coming to light. But Ben Parkin, a Labor member of Parliament, said Monday night Rachman may not be dead.

"It would be a very easy thing to switch bodies... a cremation and a stateless man and that is the end... very easy just 10 days before all hell broke loose," he told Commons.

Rachman, who owns a string of basement clubs and call girl houses in London's West End, was reported to have died of a coronary thrombosis. But rumors have circulated in Fleet Street, London's newspaper row, that it was Rachman's brother who died.

"Peter Rachman, a man I loved dearly, is indisputably dead, unfortunately," 18-year-old Mandy said.

"Two days before he died he collapsed in my arms. I was going to Paris the next day. I was prepared to stay but he said he felt all right. Two days later he died. I returned at once."

Rachman's 28-year-old wife, Audrey, identified the body. She was not available for comment.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 30-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of World Book Encyclopedia to Gary Johnson, age 11, of Dallas, Tex., for his question:

Can a pilot always find a jet stream?

A jet stream is a rushing current of air miles high above the earth. It is a tunnel of winds waving like a rippling ribbon thousands of miles around the globe. Gale winds gallop along the edges of the jet streams. The winds that rush down the centre of the tunnel are twice as fierce as a howling hurricane.

High-flying pilots discovered the jet streams in the Second World War. Later these lofty wind tunnels were explored by IGY experts. They seem to blow when and almost where they choose—a jet pilot flying four to 20 miles above the earth can never count on striking a jet stream. If he finds one flying east, he will use its super hurricane winds to waft him along. If he finds one while flying westward, he will change course. A headwind jet stream can blow a small plane to a standstill.

Though jet streams seem to blow as they choose, they nevertheless follow a few rough rules. There are four main jet stream paths, two north and two south of the equator. The windy tunnels are born aloft when weather conditions are right: then off they whiz to weave their snaky trains sometimes clear around the globe. Most jet streams blow from west to east, but in summer the polar jet stream blows from east to west.

A jet stream of speedy breezes is shaped like a flat oval thousands of wavy miles long. Sliced through the middle, the windy tunnel is about four miles from top to bottom and 300 miles from side to side.

The slowest winds are on the outside. They whoop along at 50 miles an hour, which is equal to a strong gale on the ground. About half-way to the centre, the winds may rush along at 100 miles an hour, which is 25 miles an hour faster than hurricane winds. Down the centre of the tunnel, the winds range from 150 to 300 miles an hour.

Jet Streams Circle Globe

Over North America, there are two wavy tracks where the jet streams are likely to blow. The northern track is four to eight miles high. It loops over Canada and dips down over New England. The other is 10 to 20 miles high. It swoops up from lower California to the Carolinas.

The northern jet streams circle the globe high above the Arctic. During the winter, when day never dawns in the polar regions, these jet streams blow from west to east. In spring, they turn about and blow from east to west. On the southern track, the jet streams always blow from the west. But in summer, the winds are weaker and the track moves from Texas northward to the Great Lakes.

ROCKEY PRESIDENT

NEW YORK (AP)—Robert LeBel of Chamby, Que., has been elected president of the North American branch of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

There's so much talking by prizefighters these days that it's easy to forget they used to be mere props.

Cassius Clay has 10 managers and can out-talk them, singly or collectively. Archie Moore, when he's working, does his own ballyhoo. Floyd Patterson, who doesn't talk much (and hasn't been fighting much either) is his own flack since his fallout with Gus D'Amato.

Few people have bigger warts on their tonsils than Mr. Clay. But somehow he gets too much "I" into his oratory. Until Mr. Clay meets somebody who can throw (Sonny Liston or Patterson), rather than people who catch (Henry Cooper and Doug Jones), the suspicion is that he is more wind than warrior.

In yesteryear managers were as well known as their livestock and often more lucid. They did not wear button-down shirts and sit in board rooms but conducted business in assorted pool rooms, a hunk of burning rope hanging from their lips.

Jack "Doc" Kearns was one of the elder statesmen. Mr. Kearns never stepped inside a ring unless there were half a dozen cops there to prevent violence but to hear him tell it "we moldered hundreds of dem bums."

'There Was Always More Comin' In'

Flagrant misuse of the pronoun "we" covered his fighter of the moment . . . Jack Dempsey or Mickey Walker, Joey Maxim or Archie Moore. Kearns also used the "we" extravagantly to explain a loss by one of his boys—"we wuz robbed."

Now Kearns is dead, after 80 ripe years as a miner during the Alaska Gold Rush, bartender, saloonkeeper, promoter and ballyhoo artist supreme.

This is the fellow who with promoter Tex Rickard fashioned boxing's first million-dollar gate. That was the scrap between Doc's boy, Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, the French "Orchid Man." Held at Jersey City, July 2, 1921, it drew a gross of $1,789,238.

The mind boggles at what the gate might have been if Kearns could have peddled television rights. TV? Forty-two years back, radio wasn't even making great strides. Some say it hasn't to this day but that's only hearsay.

To appreciate Kearns' attitude to money, hear Mickey Walker, who held the world welterweight and middleweight titles . . . "I had a wonderful time fighting. I loved every minute of it. I loved the glory and I loved the applause. Jack Kearns and I, we made a lot of money and his money was mine and my money was his and it never meant anything because there was always more coming in . . ."

Kearns Knew Exactly What to Say

Dempsey, Walker and Moore were skilled artisans who would have made a mint without Kearns' bare-faced blarney. Walker, the Toy Bulldog, later emerged as a painter and thespian, the type who never took a backward step for Harry Greb or Rembrandt or Alfred Lunt.

Maxim needed acres of help. A sizable package of calories too obese to be a light-heavy and lacking the cannons of a successful heavyweight, he probably never would have made a dime without Kearns calling his shots.

Kearns matched his tiger carefully, avoiding eager young men who could induce lullaby dreams with one rippling punch. Maxim's ability to box usually kept him away from disaster but one night after several close calls he returned to his corner and breathlessly asked Kearns for advice.

The Doc analyzed the situation, lit another stogie, and said: "Run."

Other managers, anxious to follow Kearns' recipe for success, plagiarized his oratorical techniques.

Among them was Chick Wergeles, a dapper little man who favored unpressed corduroy pants, leather windbreaker, a shirt of lipstick red and a hunter's cap.

He Fought to Relieve the Monopoly

Attempting one day in 1945 to stimulate interest in a match featuring one of his boys, Beau Jack, Wergeles summoned a nationally-known columnist to a press conference. Wergeles opened the meeting with: "You hafta talk to Beau. He makes a good interview on account of his southern bawling."

Hadn't Beau just stepped out of the army?

"Yes," said Wergeles, taking up the conversation. "He went in on account of he wanted to. He wasn't grafted or nothin'."

The interviewer turned away from Wergeles and focussed on Beau Jack.

He had put on weight, the columnist noted. Did he have a preference for any particular division, lightweight or welterweight?

Wergeles jumped in, lungs blaring. "Beau loves to fight. With him money is secondary. If he didn't get no pay for it, he'd still wanta fight to relieve the monopoly . . ."

This is the kind of flowery English that Doc Kearns majored in . . . the prose that filtered through sports columns into fight fans' hearts and pocketbooks . . . the stuff that meant nearly two million dollars in the till 42 years ago . . .

No Working Pact Hurts Vancouver

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—had made inquiries about joining the PCL but he mentioned only Omaha and Sacramento as strictly potential members.

Vancouver, which dropped out of the PCL last year, has paid off all debts to members and is considered interested in rejoining the league, he said. But Vancouver doesn't have the required working agreement, said PCL president Dewey Soriano.

The PCL would probably consider going from eight to 12 teams as an aid to travel and scheduling in a league that now stretches from Oklahoma to the West Coast, he said.

Aussie Netter Misses Bid for Three Titles

LONDON—Margaret Smith, first Australian to capture the women's singles crown in the Wimbledon tennis tournament, failed in her bid to collect three titles as the tournament concluded Monday.

Miss Smith, 20, won the women's singles and mixed doubles titles, but lost to Darlene Hard, of the United States, and Maria Bueno, of Brazil, in the women's doubles competition.

Miss Smith and teammate Robyn Ebbens were defeated 6-4, 9-7.

Miss Smith teamed with Ken Fletcher, of Australia, to down Miss Hard and Bob Hewitt, of Australia, in the mixed doubles event, 11-4, 6-4.

THE GLAMOROUS LIFE OF A JOCKEY

Some days you can't win. Monday was one of those days for Willie Zakoor. He swallowed a lot of mud chasing pack with Sunny Pose at Monmouth Park in New Jersey, but the best he could manage was second place. Crowning feature came when Zakoor attempted to unsaddle Sunny Pose. The horse kicked and Zakoor went flying. His expression pretty well reveals how he feels.

'G'Bye Kansas, Hello Oakland'

CLEVELAND (AP)—American League president Joe Cronin confirmed today that Charles O. Finley, owner of Kansas City Athletics, had expressed interest in moving his club to Oakland, Calif.

Cronin emphasized, however, that Finley had made "no formal request" to move the Athletics franchise. If such a request were made, it would need at least eight affirmative ballots of the 10 owners to switch the franchise.

The Associated Press learned Monday that Finley, rebuffed a year ago in his effort to move the Athletics to Dallas, was seeking a new home in California.

Oakland city council and the Alameda County board of supervisors recently approved issuing $25,000,000 in revenue bonds to build a 46,500-seat all-purpose stadium in Oakland. The park is not expected to be completed before 1965.

Horace Stoneham, president of the National League's San Francisco Giants, confirmed that Finley had approached him in an effort to secure the use of the Giants' Candlestick Park until the Oakland stadium was finished.

"Mr. Finley was in to see me 10 days or two weeks ago," Stoneham said in San Francisco. "He asked me if his club could play in Candlestick Park as a starter—until Oakland finished a proposed stadium."

"It hit us like a bombshell," said one club owner. "No one expected it."

Several American League owners said privately a Kansas City-to-Oakland move would be welcomed since it would create a second Pacific Coast team to match the Los Angeles Angels, simplify travel arrangements, reduce costs, and create a strong intra-state rivalry.

Figures released today show 12 teams, including the pace-setting New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers, with attendance declines at the midway point of the current season.

Spokane Indians, 1962 pennant kings, lost 4-2 to the PCL All-Stars Tuesday night before 6,596.

Spokane, which dropped out of the PCL last year, has paid off all debts to members and is considered interested in rejoining the league, he said. But Vancouver doesn't have the required working agreement, said PCL president Dewey Soriano.

The PCL would probably consider going from eight to 12 teams as an aid to travel and scheduling in a league that now stretches from Oklahoma to the West Coast, he said.

JACK BIONDA

ON SCORING QUEST

Jack's Ambition Could Hurt Rocks

Jack Bionda has his sights set on a scoring target that could add up to bad boxline news this week for Victoria Shamrocks.

Bionda and his New Westminster mates move into Memorial Arena Wednesday for an Inter-City Lacrosse League tussle with Victoria Shamrocks and then host the Rocks the following night at Queen's Park Arena in important arguments for both clubs.

Westminster needs a pair of wins to stay on the heels of Vancouver, out in front by three points and expected to collect victories at home against Nanaimo tonight and at Nanaimo Saturday.

Shamrocks, now seven points up on Nanaimo, are shooting for at least one triumph to take a more comfortable grasp on the league's third and last playoff position.

They can expect some of their biggest troubles this week from Bionda, rated by some as the game's most talented performer and always a tough man to contain.

Big Jack could be even tougher than usual because four more goals will lift him into second place on the league's all-time scoring list.

Bionda scored six times last week to become the fourth player in ICLL to pass the 600-goal milestone. His 602-goal total is topped only by three retired stars—Jack Norrup, who fired 635 tallies before calling it quits, Bill Dickinson (605) and Archie Brown (603).

Two other players have chances to hit century marks in the two-game series. Victoria's Whitely Severson, the league's all-time point

Mann Cup Final in East Or No Lacrosse Playoff

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Mann Cup lacrosse series must be played in the east or cancelled, Tom Gordon, Inter-City Lacrosse League commissioner, said here Monday.

He took time out from his vacation to issue the statement and also to fine the Vancouver and New Westminster clubs $100 each for a brawl between players in the Royal City last Thursday.

Mr. Gordon said the decision to play the Mann Cup series in the east was made at the annual meeting of the Canadian Lacrosse Association in January, and the association must stick to its decision or cancel the series.

"We would not approve of bringing an eastern club here and endeavoring to sell an inferior eastern team to our fans as has been the case with the last three or four clubs that came here," he said.

"Should the association choose to cancel the series the Inter-City Lacrosse League will apply for permission to play a series between our two western finalists in Portland between Sept. 8 and 23."

Mr. Gordon said CLA president Merv Ferguson had assured him of a definite answer on the on-off Mann Cup situation before July 17.

He said the west was still prepared to send its champions east without strengthening the team and would allow the east to strengthen, even to the status of an all-star team.

Commenting on the brawl at Queen's Park Arena, in which both teams participated, Mr. Gordon said he could not remember any incident in the past where two teams were fined for such actions.

Tugs Swamp Nanaimo

Keith Lawrence and Ron Marshall each collected eight points Monday night as Victoria Tugmen steamed to a 22-0 victory over Nanaimo Volvos in Senior "B" Lacrosse League action at Memorial Arena.

Lawrence scored two goals and assisted on six more for his eight points, while Marshall fired six tallies and collected two assists.

Junior Shamrock reserve goal-tender Jim Place turned in another outstanding performance for Tugmen.

Paul Collett, youngest of the Collett brothers, picked up three Victoria goals, as did Whitely Wigmore and Stu Walker. Daryl McIntyre scored twice.

For Volvos, Ray Biggs, Mike Good and Alf Wakelyn each picked up two goals.

NICKLAUS SHARP . . .

New Reason to Worry

ST. ANNES, Eng. (AP)—Masters champion Jack Nicklaus is a little worried today because he's playing too well in practice.

Nicklaus rates second only to Arnold Palmer among the betting favorites in the 72-hole British Open championship starting Wednesday.

A total of 120 golfers are chasing the title won the last two years by Palmer. Nicklaus, 23-year-old from Tucson, Ariz., has shot 70-68-68-67 in practice rounds over the 6,852-yard Royal Lytham and St. Annes links. Par for the course is 72.

"But I still think this is not a course to suit me," Nicklaus said.

. . . PALMER FAVORED

"If you get a crooked drive—and I'm likely to—then you can find lots of trouble off the line."

"Another thing—I'm playing too well in practice. The trouble may be waiting for me later."

Palmer is 2 to 1 in the betting. Nicklaus and South Africa's Gary Player are rated 7-to-1 shots.

But the bookies took another look at those odds today after Nicklaus' good round and clipped him to 5-to-1.

Palmer had a 71 in practice Monday despite a head cold.

"I had trouble breathing out there," the 33-year-old Latrobe, Pa., pro said.

Wakeham Two Strokes Away From Leaders

VANCOUVER—Defending champion Bill Wakeham of Victoria was two strokes off the pace as the second half of the 36-hole qualifying round in the B.C. Amateur golf championship started this morning.

Wind, rain and the long Richmond Golf and Country Club course produced troubles for Wakeham and other favorites in the first 18 qualifying holes Monday as Vancouver swingers Doug Bajus and Bud Bird stepped into the lead.

Not expected to be among the top contenders before the annual event started, Bajus and Bird toured the four-year-old course in one-over-par 73s for a one-stroke lead over two players.

The low 32 players in the field of 106 after today's play will advance to match-play competition, which winds up Saturday with a 36-hole final.

SENSATIONAL PUTT

Bajus, 39-year-old former B.C. Willingdon Cupper, and playing in his first major tournament in three years, finished Monday with a one-under 35 after scoring 38 on the first nine holes.

Bird, a 30-year-old carpenter who this year captured the Vancouver parks board title, stroked in a 45-foot birdie putt on the 18th green to tie Bajus.

Sharing third place with 74s were Terry Campbell, the 1960 Canadian junior king, and Don Gardner, former member of the Manitoba Willingdon Cup team.

Wakeham was deadlocked at 75 with Vancouver's Peter Gill and former University of B.C. ace Gary Puder.

Five players finished with 76s as the 6,800-yard course was playing at its toughest. Constant winds, gusting up to 25 m.p.h., gave golfers most of their trouble, but rain-sodden fairways made the course play longer than usual.

JOHNSON HAS 76

Johnny Johnson, 1959 Canadian champion, finished with 76, as did John Russell, long-hitting winner of the Ogopogo tournament last week in Kelowna.

Bert Ticehurst, another favorite, had to rally after a 41 on the first nine to come in with 77.

COLTS COLLAR RICHARDS FOR 6 MORE YEARS

HOUSTON (AP)—The National League Houston Colt .45s announced Saturday they have extended Paul Richards' contract as general manager for six years.

Roy Hofheinz, Colts' president, said: "Richards has done an outstanding job of laying the foundation for a successful club in less than two years."

"We wanted to make certain nothing would clash with his task of building the .45s into a contender by giving him a long-term contract."

Richards came to Houston from the field manager's job at Baltimore in September, 1961.

Heavy Rain Mars Win By B.C. Boys

LONDON (CP)—Pouring rain marred a track and field victory by British Columbia schoolboy athletes over Woolverstone Hall School, Ipswich, Saturday.

The Canadians won by 73 points to 49 in a meet run on a grass track during what coach Derek Hyde-Lay called "dreadful conditions."

One of the best Canadian performances came from 15-year-old Tim Yaryan of University School, Victoria, who hurled the discus 148 feet, 9 inches.

Scott MacCardell, 17, also of University School, cleared five feet, six inches in the high jump and 17-year-old Mark Appleton of Shawinigan Lake School had a time of 10.5 in the 100 yards.

'Caretaker' Puzzles, Intrigues

By AUDREY S.D. JOHNSON
Victoria's only avant garde theatre group, Intimate Stage, has come up with yet another puzzling but interesting and challenging piece of contemporary drama with "The Caretaker," by England's Harold Pinter.

Opening Monday night in the 100-seat workshop theatre on the Gordon Head campus of the University of Victoria, it will continue through the week, closing on Saturday.

The three nightmarish characters whose relationship to each other shifts about throughout the three acts in unpredictable kaleidoscopic patterns, brought arresting performances from actors Rick Darnell, Blain Fairman and Bill McColl.

Style of the production arrived at by director Tony Nicholson, was entirely realistic. In fact, from a certain basic theatrical point of view, too much so.

Dialogue of the apparent
"going nowhere" kind that nevertheless subtly underscores comment or characteristic, is brilliantly employed by the author.

But when all the pauses and hesitations of natural conversation are laid end to end on the stage, the effect is to drag out the fabric of the play until it becomes tedious.

All plays ever written, from the Greeks down to Albee and Pinter, have an individual rhythm and pace.

It is as impossible to write as to breathe without rhythm.
Principal fault with this production then, was the failure to discover its proper rhythm and pace and to phrase correctly such moments as Blain Fair-man's long speech concerning his madness.

On the credit side, Mr. Nicholson had made good use of the unique theatre's physical properties and his staging was extremely effective.

As to the three young actors, they are persons of quite exceptional talent. Bill McColl sustaining a difficult characterization as a senile, decrepit bit of human garbage, projected strongly while he played with striking attention to detail and remarkable concentration.

Mr. Fairman and Mr. Darnell each provided well thought out portraits.

The wry-faced comedy that touches the piece here and there was much enjoyed by Monday's audience. Mr. Nicholson and his group are to be commended for their enterprise in bringing so interesting and provocative a play to the attention of local theatregoers.

Canada's Private TV Reports Big Profit

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's nine "second" television stations as a group had a 1962 operating profit of more than $1,000,000, not counting depreciation.

For most of them it was only their second full year on the air.

The financial position of the group of nine is outlined briefly in the annual report of the Board of Broadcast Governors for the year ended last March 31. The report was made public Monday.

In calendar-year 1961, the nine stations—some of them only operating for part of that year—had a $4,800,000 loss. But in 1962 their gross broadcast revenue went up 51 per cent to give them the operating profit.

The stations are the privately-owned English language TV outlets in main centres.

Arthur Mayse

As darkness settled over Victoria on Friday night, a polite but very tough police dog by the name of Royal Mounty stopped by with an invitation to accompany him on his rounds.

Mounty works for Western Home Guard Patrol Ltd., an agency with which 900 householders and 140 businesses in Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Victoria City and Langford supplement their regular police protection. This the two-year-old outfit accomplishes with five radio cars, 14 men directed by company president Earl H. Lehna, and eight male German shepherds.

Most of Mr. Lehna's operators have had auxiliary police school training. They wear uniforms but carry no guns. As Mounty demonstrated to me before the night was over, he's a more potent weapon than any revolver.

Superbly schooled by head patrolman and dog trainer George Barr, 28, Mounty is safer company than the average house pet. But a word or signal from his master will transform him into a fanged projectile that shoots around corners, over fences and down dark stairs to home on his target.

This spectacle I didn't witness Friday night, since crime remained disappointingly torpid on our beat. But during the last year, Earl Lehna tells me, Mounty and his companions have flushed out and halted more than 70 thieves, peeping toms and prowlers.

Patrols can apprehend, George Barr explained as we walked toward his little black car with the company shield on its flank, but they aren't empowered to make arrests. That's left to the police officer who takes charge of a bad guy generally so scared that he can't even come up with phony name or alibi.

In the half-screened rear compartment, Mounty sat quiet, but with ears alertly pricked.

"Friend," George said as he opened the passenger door. I got in, and we drove downtown with Mounty discreetly snuffing the back of my neck.

We checked a wharf and warehouse area on the Inner Harbor. Working to hand signals, Mounty covered each murky nook and cranny. George checked the warehouse door. He carried a flashlight, but used it sparingly.

"We got a prowler in here among the crates a while back," he said casually. "Another time, Mounty barked for me from the edge of the dock. He'd spotted a body against the piles."

Inspections are staggered. The would-be thief watching from some vantage point till the patrol pulled out might minutes later find Mounty lunging at him from some pit of darkness.

We came up off the dock, George briefing me as we continued our stop-go progress. He trains search dogs — which, he emphasizes aren't attack dogs unless so commanded — without the use of leg or arm guards. Mounty, Squamish-bred, is six. His jaws have a crushing power of 600 pounds per square inch. So swiftly does he leap into action that only by a fluke could a gunman hope to score on him.

A round of door-testing fetched us to a furrier's store. George chose a key from the ring clipped to his Sam Browne belt and let us in. The place was dim-lit and eerie, the smell of furs strong in the quiet air. Gazed on by mannequins in mink, we threaded, dim aisles. Mounty didn't even sniff the bundles of rich pelts in the cutting rooms. He made his rounds in utter silence, finishing off with a tour of the basement.

We worked an office building top to bottom. Someone had left a door unlocked. It yielded to George's sudden push; and on the instant, Mounty was past him, questing the dark interior.

At a large clothing store, George told me, "Wait outside a couple of minutes, then test the latch." He and Mounty went in by a door around the corner. I waited as instructed, then gave the latch the merest flutter.

It was like calling up a demon. Against the inside glass, level with my chest, appeared a snarling mask that couldn't possibly belong to the dog who had greeted me so courteously an hour before.

The glass between me and that menacing apparition seemed of a sudden very much too thin. I stepped back — a long, fast step — and while groping for a cigarette, pondered something Mounty's master had told me minutes ago.

"A property trained dog," he'd said, "is worth a dozen policemen." That's it for today, except to note that Mounty shook hands most amiably before we parted, and that tomorrow we'll prow a sleeping suburb with another of Earl Lehna's formidable man-and-dog patrol teams.

Position is everything says tennis instructor Natalya Littleton.

Is There a New Tennis Champ Among Them?

Anyone for tennis? About 50 youngsters answered the call Monday afternoon in Central Park.

And among that 50 may be tomorrow's champion as Central Park has been the training ground for many of Canada's well-known tennis players.

Gordon Hartley, tennis instructor and director of the city playgrounds program, recalls that Susan Butt, once Canada's No. 1 woman tennis player, started playing in Central Park. John Fraser, formerly Canada's No. 1 junior player and now one of Canada's best seniors, played his first tournament game on the same courts.

These are only two of the champions who started their career in Central Park where free instruction is now being given as part of the summer playgrounds program.

Children ranging from 8-14 years of age were lined up long before starting time.

Although a lob and a smash may have sounded foreign to them on Monday they will be familiar terms when it comes time for the annual playground tennis tournament, Aug. 1-3.

Assisting Mr. Hartley is 16-year-old Natalya Littleton, who is also assistant supervisor in Stadacona Park.

For children in the Victoria area swimming classes started this morning in the Crystal Garden. Tuesdays are reserved for boys, Friday for girls.

Thomas Miles, 439 Richmond, took first prize in the babies and children category with his study of a small blonde girl in a pensive mood.

A bold action shot of drillers using jackhammers won first Boats outlined in sharp silhouette by a setting sun were the subject of Mrs. A. C. Wilson's first prize winner in the scenes and tabletops category. She lives at 1810 Hollywood Crescent.

And the first prize winner in the animal life category was won by Ray Heald, with his snap of four raccoons climbing out of a barrel, watched by a crow.

These four people win $10 weekly prizes, and are eligible for $25 over-all prizes in the six-week contest.

Over-all winners will be entered in the national contest, with prizes up to $1,000.

Their winning pictures will be printed in the Times this week, starting Wednesday.

Honorable mentions go to Mrs. A. C. Wilson, James Barr, Suzanne Campbell, Mrs. Walter Cook, Brian Hobbs and Vicky Douglas.

This week's contest closes at noon on Saturday.

Five Escape Market Street Duplex Blaze

Five occupants of a duplex at 751 Market escaped unhurt when a fire swept through the back of the building at about 1 a.m. today.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis West were asleep in the building when their landlord, Bali Kundra, who lives across the street, noticed smoke pouring from the building.

He sounded the alarm and Mr. and Mrs. West and the occupants of the front duplex, escaped. Three city rigs extinguished the blaze within half an hour.

The fire started in a wood box that is open to the outside. From there it spread up the wall to the roof. Cause of the blaze has not been determined.

Red Ink Turns Them White

By MONTE ROBERTS

While longshoremen continue to negotiate in an effort to iron out a new contract, the always-sensitive shipping industry is quivering a little with strike apprehension.

Vancouver Island ports are still fairly busy, mainly with lumber carriers, but the arrival boards are beginning to look pretty lean.

Ship-owners, understandably, are reluctant to commit ships to an area where complete loading can't be guaranteed. There's nothing a dollar-conscious shipowner dreads more than a partially loaded ship.

As of noon today, there were only seven ships on the pilot board at B.C. Pilothage here, and one of them is the P & O-Orient liner Oriana (see below).

Most shipping men feel the possibility of a strike is remote—but remote or not, it influences the thinking of executives in skyscrapers high above Wall Street.

They remember the last strike, when 18 or 20 ships swung to anchor in Vancouver harbor and the owners sweated red ink.

The 42,000-ton Oriana will make an appearance for the fraternity of waterfront watchers at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday—IF nothing happens to change her plans.

The official party—including pilot, customs, immigration, quarantine, and assorted pressmen—will go aboard via launch at the fairway buoy off Brothje Ledge. Then the big ship will make her leisurely way to Vancouver, passing fairly close to Clover Point, but providing probably the best view off Ten Mile Point.

She's due at 9 p.m. at the mainland, with 1,619 passengers inbound from the U.K., Australia, South Pacific, and Hawaii.

The waterfront watchers will have to stay up late Thursday if they want to see her floodlit hull leaving these waters. She's due to sail from Vancouver at 8 p.m., heading for San Francisco, San Diego, Acapulco and home port via the Panama, completing a 75-day round-the-world voyage.

Victoria's oft-abused Fountain Circle will be gone by the end of the year, the mayor and special traffic committee chairman predicted today.

Mayor R. B. Wilson concurred with committee chairman Ald. M. H. Mooney after the advisory committee met behind closed doors today, that there would be a new traffic plan in operation at the controversial Douglas-Gorge-Hillside intersection in a few months.

The committee made two specific recommendations to council:

(1) Purchase a set of standard traffic control signals at a cost of about $6,500.

(2) Take positive action in implementing a traffic plan for the intersection.

$45,000 COST

"I predict it will be improved and in operation by the end of the year. I wouldn't have done so six months ago," Ald. Mooney said.

"I'm very pleased we've got some definite action. I think we can get a basic plan into operation for about $45,000," the chairman said.

"It looks as though we're finally getting somewhere," Mayor Wilson said.

Basically, the plan calls for removal of the circle and fountain, extension of the streets and widening in certain locations.

It means acquisition of a slice of land on Hillside to allow for turning movements.

The committee also considered that something will have to be done about all-day parking in the area to allow for freer traffic movement, Ald. Mooney said.

Reconstructed Rose Street as a north-south artery is expected to come into its own when actual reconstruction of the circle intersection is begun.

Future plans for the intersection call for conversion to automatic signals, with allowance for one-way streets as recommended in a former plan, the Faustman Report on Victoria traffic, prepared at a cost of $16,000 in 1956.

More Demolition

Pre-demolition work on two old buildings at Broad and Pandora was under way today. The two-storey buildings are the next to go to make way for Victoria Centennial Square development.

Hearing Assured Ferry Man

The B.C. Civil Service Commission is "working on" setting up an appeal hearing for former B.C. Ferry Nainimo terminal manager Jack Washer, commission chairman Dr. Hugh Morrison's office said today.

A spokesman said Mr. Washer had written a formal request for the hearing, and the request was being acted on. No date has yet been set.

SHORTAGES

Mr. Washer is protesting his dismissal from the service following the discovery of shortages at the Nanaimo toll office.

He was fired for lack of supervision after a secret investigation at the terminal revealed the shortages. A toll collector, who is alleged to have stolen large sums of money was discharged earlier. Mr. Washer said today he wrote Arthur G. Richardson, chief personnel officer in the civil service, late in June, asking for a hearing. Mr. Richardson advised him by letter a week later to write Dr. Morrison, which Mr. Washer did, mailing the letter July 4.

NEW SYSTEM

Premier W. A. C. Bennett indicated Monday there might be a change in the method of collecting ferry tolls.

"If ferry officials can come up with something better it will be done," he said.

He stressed the fact that all toll employees are bonded (the bond sum is $10,000), and he was sure the bonding company had been notified, and would be prepared to make up any amounts of money that were actually missing.

"We believe our employees are honest," he said, "but sometimes, just as in business, these things occur." The premier said inquiries into the Nanaimo situation, and toll collection in general, was being carried out in a "very thorough way."

Topics of the Day

The B.C. government ferry Queen of the Islands started her regular schedule today.

The $2,000,000 ferry was scheduled to start into service last Thursday but ran into trouble on her maiden voyage when a bearing in a propeller shaft coupling failed.

Ferry officials said the "Queen" started from Long Harbor on Salt Spring Island at 6:05 this morning on the trip to Tsawwassen.

She made two stops at other islands en route.

From now on she will leave Tsawwassen for the Gulf Islands daily at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me if a person who feels they have the knowledge, can they write the Grade 12 university entrance exams without having written any of the previous high school exams? I understand this is called "home study" and anyone who does it will be awarded the necessary 120 credits. G.R.

A. Any person who is can write these exams. However, if you intend to write with the idea of obtaining university entrance standing it is necessary to have your previous school records evaluated in advance by the provincial department of education. This is done to determine a person's deficiencies in terms of B.C. requirements for university entrance.

At the conclusion of the marking of examinations, an adjudicating committee grants final standing. If a candidate meets the requirements in full, this will be indicated on a document which is mailed to him.

An question should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old currency or securities. These should be estimated to a dealer. Answers without a question number is printed in error. The question number and the Times address to ask the Editor, questions and answers will be published daily.

World president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce will pay a flying visit to Victoria early next week.

Eric Stevenson, an Edinburgh businessman, will arrive Monday evening in time for a reception, a dinner, and a quick call on Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes, and leave Tuesday morning.

Leader of the world's 216,000 Jaycees, Mr. Stevenson spends most of his time travelling around the 15 member countries.

He is a director of three Edinburgh food manufacturing concerns.

The YMCA may steer some young applicants toward the four-year-old City of Victoria scholarship for a high school student entering a university physical education course.

The $250 scholarship, introduced at the suggestion of Prince Philip during the 1959 Royal Tour, has never been claimed.

Council offers the money to a resident of the city of Victoria attending a Greater Victoria high school, agreeing originally to provide one prize a year for five years.

"A number of our young people who might have qualified for it have passed through our program," wrote "Y" physical director A. C. Burgess in asking for information.

Emmanuel Baptist Church is holding a vacation church school in the Fellowship Hall, Gladstone and Fernwood, this week from 9 a.m. to noon.

Classes are for children in the 4 to 12 age group.

Mrs. A. C. Hamill, director of the school, has invited parents and friends of the children to attend closing exercises Friday evening at 7.

A Chemainus man pleaded guilty in Esquimalt magistrate's court today to driving while impaired.

LeRoy Bobroske, 9938 Maple, Chemainus, was fined $250 and had his licence suspended by Magistrate William Oester. Bobroske hit a parked car when he drove east on Lockley Road shortly before 8 p.m. Monday. When police arrested him he had to be supported.

Bobroske told police he had been drinking wine.

Four movies about Scotland will be featured this evening at the Victoria Film Festival in Beacon Hill Park.

Curtain time is 8:30 and the films are shown at Cameron Bandshell.

Tonight's presentations are Seawards the Great Ships, Weave Me a Rainbow, Coasts of Clyde, and The Heart Is Highland.

The sales tax reduction announced Monday night by Finance Minister Gordon has led to an immediate decision by the East Asiatic Company (Canada) Ltd. to build a $1,000,000 office building in Vancouver at the corner of Pender and Bute Streets.

In addition, J. V. Christensen, East Asiatic Co. president, told the Times in a telephone interview that plans for a $50,000,000 pulp mill to be built by a subsidiary company at Gold River near Tahsis Inlet, on Vancouver Island, will be reconsidered soon.

Mr. Christensen said his company, the Canadian branch of a world-wide Danish company which has large timber holdings on the Island, would have to look at the whole economic picture before deciding on the pulp mill.

There was no smell of alcohol on the victim's breath, and no bottles or other indications that he had been drinking.

"The man was obviously dazed, mildly concussed probably, and had received injuries that would leave him paralyzed from the neck down. He could feel nothing from his limbs," said Dr. James Fidess, who attended him.

"Anything he said obviously was nothing to go on."

"The injury the man received would render him paralyzed almost instantly. It might lead to his saying something like that," agreed the doctor who performed the post-mortem.

Corner's jury refused to fix blame in what they ruled was an accidental death "caused by negligence," because they said the evidence was conflicting.

Driver of the other car involved was Kenneth Whittingham, 1610 Earliston.

'Hands Off' Bennett Tells Saskatchewan

Premier Bennett Monday warned Saskatchewan to "keep its cotton-picking hands off our resources."

This sharp slap was delivered at New Democratic party Premier Woodrow S. Lloyd.

Mr. Lloyd issued a statement in Regina expressing grave concern about the effects on the prairies of B.C.'s Columbia River power development.

He warned NDP members would fight it when the Columbia treaty and B.C.-Ottawa agreement go before the House of Commons external affairs committee. He said the B.C. project could in years to come have a serious effect on prairie water supply.

Mr. Bennett made it clear in a Times interview that he considered it none of Saskatchewan's business.

"It is B.C.'s development," he said. "That NDP government in Saskatchewan had better be told to keep its cotton-picking hands off our resources."

Acting Deans Appointed For University

University of Victoria Board of Governors Monday night appointed acting deans in the arts and education faculties.

Former college vice-principal Robert Wallace was named acting dean of arts and science, while H. C. Gilliland was given the acting post in the education faculty.

The appointments are expected to stand until full-time deans are appointed by the first president of the university, yet to be selected.

'Casual' Look the Mark of Fall

NEW YORK (UPI) —The casual look of country clothes taken to town for fall and winter.

Babushkas and boots were a couple of the earmarks of the overwhelming trend to easy-going clothes as the New York couture group of designers-manufacturers opened Monday a series of shows for visiting fashion editors from the United States and Canada. The couture group showings, lasting through Friday, will be followed by another series of shows for four days by a newly-formed American designers group including some California firms.

Some of the babushkas were casual scarves, tied peasant fashion, around the head. In some collections, the babushka was fur. One manufacturer showed a leopard scarf worn with a slim-cut beige wool day-time dress.

Select Your Summer Shift At This Inexpensive Rack

By PENNY SAVER

What's in a name? "Sacks" when they were supposed to be stylish just didn't seem to go over very well. Now that they have become "shifts," the female outlook is quite favorable.

On the large rack-of shifts—in the store Penny visited, there is bound to be one that appeals to you.

Very smart are some in a cotton knit material, particularly as they come in plain colors.

For the vacationer spending her time on the beaches, terry towel shifts are ideal. One Penny liked was white with gold buttons down the side and a knee-tickling fringe around the hemline. But there are all kinds—in stripes and floral patterns of every hue.

Most are $3.98, but one or two—that come adorned with enormous pockets or that button down the front are priced at $5.98.

Shop also has a good selection of two-piece sets. There are skirts, Jamaica shorts and slims, all with various kinds of tops. Prices start at $2.98.

THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

Fifty Years of Marriage

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Coates, 2520 Fernwood Road, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on Tuesday, July 16, with an "at home" for friends and relatives from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., and again from 7 to 9 p.m. They were married in St. Peter's Anglican Church in Winnipeg and lived for 47 years there, coming to Victoria three years ago to make their home. Mr. Coates saw service in the First World War with the 107th Battalion, and latterly was superintendent with the Department of Veterans' Affairs. He is a past grand patron of Manitoba Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, his office running concurrently with that of his wife, who is a past grand matron of the chapter. They have one son, Alan, who will come from Toronto for the celebration.

In Vermont

Miss Cheryl Borris has left for Bennington, Vermont, where she will attend piano classes given by Prof. Edwin Freundlich of the Juillard School of Music. The young musician is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Borris, Lincoln Road.

Arrives Friday

Miss Ann MacDougall will arrive in Victoria on Friday after spending a year overseas. Before going to Europe, Miss MacDougall visited a former Victorian, Miss Nancy Nicholson, in Philadelphia. After touring France, Austria, Italy, Holland, Spain and Switzerland, she spent the winter months as a student at a school in St. Legier. Her sister, Miss Josephine MacDougall, leaves by air on Wednesday.

BE SMART—

Wear a fresh linen sheath to work and look businesslike all day. Comes dusk, work some twilight magic of your own: button or tie on a crisp organza overskirt, and night-fall jewelry and try a gala evening on for size.

Boots stepped out in almost every collection—most of them worn with bulky, country-type tweeds and shaggy mohairs, but a few were jewelled brocade or jet beaded to wear with evening fashions.

Daytime boots in suede or kid came in three heights—almost to the knee, mid-calf, and ankle high. Also part of the casual trend: endorsement of the mid-height heel for day, shown in many cases as a single tie, oxford walking shoe.

In silhouette and length of skirts for day there was little change from the previous fall and winter collections of women's wear.

The shape overwhelmingly was slim for both day and evening, with more long evening dresses than last season. Most of the floor length gowns were in wool instead of the traditional silks. The shaped waist and bell-shaped skirt for dressy clothes was nil.

Daytime hem lengths remained just barely covering the knee-cap.

Throughout the collections which the nation's store buyers and New York and Philadelphia reporters saw in late May and early June, here were some of the things everyone in the multi-billion dollar New York fashion market was doing:

—The casual looking jumper, for both day and evening. Some of the elaborate jumpers came with sealskin sleeves and collar, with the rest of the garment wool. Others contrasted wool with velvet. One firm showed a shiny jet fabric combined with wool for evening.

—A revival of velvet everywhere for late day and evening clothes, most often shown in black. Other fabrics, in the more casual clothes, included deep-textured tweeds, shaggy mohairs, wide wide corduroys and twills.

—Use of fur in novel as well as traditional manner. Weary of merely lining a satin evening coat in mink, designers turned to making mink blouses, sleeveless, to go with tweed suits, or using white mink for sleeveless: weskit tops for wool evening dresses.

Grimshaw-Andrews Wedding Day

S. George the Martyr Church at Cadboro Bay was the setting for the recent ceremony which united in marriage Vivian Maureen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Andrews, of South Burnaby, and Robert Clinton Grimshaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Grimshaw, of Saanichton.

Canon H. C. Butler officiated. Timothy Vernon was organist. The lovely auburn-haired bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a full-length gown of white organza over satin, with scalloped neckline.

Her three-tier veil pouffed from a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and red roses.

Original shade of the attendants' gowns was derived from posing mauve organza over cerise peau de sole. Their headpieces were of dark pink net and a flower which toned with the gowns. They carried pink carnations.

Attendants were Miss Sonja Rondestvedt, Vancouver; Miss Diane Carter, New Westminster, and the groom's sister, Miss Judith Grimshaw, Toronto.

William F. Grimshaw was best man for his twin brother. Ushers were Ronald and Robert Trickett.

Keith Elder, Vancouver, proposed the toast at a reception in Holyrood House.

For a honeymoon trip to Calgary the bride chose a shocking pink sheath topped with white coat and complemented by a black picture hat.

The couple is now living in Saanichton.

Many guests came from Vancouver for the wedding. They were Mrs. P. Boal, Miss M. Fay, Mr. and Mrs. William McCarris, Mr. and Mrs. B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. L. Piercey, J. Ringaring, of Walla Walla, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, 1063 Dunford Street, have announced the engagement of their daughter Marlene Carol Ashworth, to Mr. John Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Richardson, 1818 Julia Street. The wedding will take place on July 20 at 8 p.m., in Gordon United Church, Langford. (Meyers Studio.)

Mr. and Mrs. H. Carter, Mrs. J. Palsat, Mr. L. Greenfield, Mr. and Mrs. W. Semerick, Mr. and Mrs. T. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wallace, Miss I. Heard, Mr. R. Goodman, Mr. and Mrs. A. ## WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

One Way to Beat the Heat If the Sun Does Shine

Today the hot summer temperatures are not such a burden as they once were because of air conditioning.

However many people still fight the elements without this weapon. So, let us consider measures to make your summer more comfortable when you are not in air-conditioned surroundings.

I learned some of these life-saving methods when I lived in the tropics. In the tropics everyone does their marketing, errands and as much housework as possible early in the morning. They also indulge in sports such as tennis or golf early in the day, often before going to work. For a couple of hours at noon shades are drawn and fans hum behind them. There is very little sign of life anywhere.

Just these few examples can add to your summer comfort during very hot weather. The habit of dashing about during the middle of the day is extremely wilting and tiring. The woman in the home will profit by doing most of the cooking in the morning, preparing dishes which can be quickly heated or eaten cold later on.

That nap or rest after lunch, even if it is for a much shorter time, can refresh you.

Also those with tropical know-how open the windows after the air has cooled and close them early in the morning before it begins to heat up in order to capture and hold the cooler nighttime atmosphere.

Also, simplify life as much as possible during the hot season. For instance: Use paper plates. They are greatly improved now and are pleasant to eat from. Paper napkins and hand towels will also make a big difference.

Overstuffed upholstered furniture is hot. Slip covers made of a cool smooth fabric are cooling. Greens make us feel refreshed and cooler. Use them in the fireplace and let them trail from pots. Try not to hurry. This is very heating. Give in to the mood of Manana, or tomorrow.

Go without stockings and Water is extremely cooling. If you do not live near a river, lake, sea or a swimming pool, put on your bathing suit and get under the garden sprinkler or have someone turn the hose on you. Even in the hottest weather this will cool you off for quite a while.

All of these small details add up to a much happier and cooler summer!

ANTI-SUB

Admiral Rayner was asking for eight submarines.

He said the three Halifax-based submarines on loan from the Royal Navy will have to be replaced by 1966 or 1967. Submarines could be built in Canada but it would be cheaper to purchase them from Britain.

The British Oberon class conventional submarine was in production and could be obtained quickly.

Admiral Rayner said the RCN now could "decisively defeat" the conventional Soviet submarine but the nuclear submarine had a big advantage over present anti-submarine forces.

Russia had more than 20 nuclear submarines and was increasing this force.

"The addition of submarines to our present maritime forces would improve and diversify our anti-submarine capability," Admiral Rayner said.

SHIPS WEAR OUT

Admiral Rayner said the 11 Tribal class destroyers now in the fleet are rapidly wearing out and should be taken out of service by 1970. The 17 Presto-class frigates were rapidly reaching the end of their economical lives.

At the same time, Admiral Rayner said, Canada has committed 29 warships to NATO's Atlantic Command. One submarine would be counted by NATO as a replacement for one destroyer.

He said the RCN has been hindered from operating in the north by lack of icebreakers and a tanker ship. This situation would improve but the threat to Canada was much greater from the Atlantic and Pacific than from the Arctic. If the nuclear submarine problem were solved in the Atlantic and Pacific, Russia might then station its submarines in the Arctic.

Garden Apartments Opposed By All Candidates in Esquimalt

All three candidates in Wednesday's Esquimalt byelection are opposed to a garden apartment development in the municipality.

Candidates' policies differ mostly in their degree of criticism of the present council.

Byelection is being held to fill a council vacancy resulting from the death of Coun. G. K. Sammon in England in May.

Most outspoken critic of the Esquimalt council is Ernest Cassels, president of the Esquimalt United Action Association, and a defeated candidate in the last council election.

He is vehemently opposed to a proposal to rezone 7.9 acres of the old Transfer property north of Old Esquimalt Road so that a 97-suite garden apartment development may be built.

Portugal Recalls Congo Envoy

LISBON, Portugal (Reuters) — The Portuguese government ordered its charge d'affaires in the Congo to leave Leopoldville today following Congolese recognition of a "foreign group" as the legitimate representative of the African colony of Angola.

The group mentioned in the communique is the Angolan "government-in-exile" in Leopoldville.

The communique said that on June 28 the Leopoldville government gave recognition to a group "led by foreigners and paid also by foreign interests, namely not African."

He then broke an egg on Dickerson's head, smeared it about his face and threw a milkshake container of water on him.

has offered Esquimalt council $20,000 for the land if it can be rezoned for the development.

The Esquimalt United Action Association was formed specifically to block the proposal.

Mr. Cassels has said that his group will obtain an injunction if necessary to prevent the garden apartments being built.

"RADICAL GROUP"

Arthur Mebs, who also opposes the rezoning, feels that the council has done "a magnificent job," and is anxious to co-operate with the council.

He calls the United Action Association a "radical group," of newcomers, and feels "they are not going to win many friends."

"These threats to sue before a decision has been made, around the time of an election, make me wonder what Mr. Cassels is really interested in," he says.

WHY SO HIGH?

C. L. Fraser, who also opposes the rezoning, is more interested in finding out why Esquimalt has such a high insurance rate.

"I believe a thorough investigation of the fire protection in the municipality is necessary with a view to eliminating the penalty imposed upon residents by the Canadian Insurance Underwriters' Association."

Polling stations are at the Municipal Hall for voters on Section One of the voters' list, and at 885 Craigflower Road for voters on Section Two of the list.

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

CNR Negro Porters Protest

WINNIPEG (CP)—The federal government was asked today to investigate alleged job discrimination against Negro porters on the CNR.

Eighteen Negro members of the sleeping car porters branch of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) made the request.

It was contained in a formal complaint filed with the federal labor department and made public here Tuesday.

At the same time, a porters' spokesman, Lee Williams, blamed the railway brotherhood rather than the company for the situation.

Mr. Williams said in an interview that the union's head office had blocked efforts to change a working agreement preventing the promotion of railway porters.

But the complaint, received in Ottawa Tuesday, accused both the union and the railway of violating the Canada Fair Employment Practices Act.

EXCLUDES ALL PORTERS

The complaint said the working agreement between the brotherhood and the government-owned railway specifically excludes porters from promotion.

Further discrimination of this type against Negro porters "because of their color" had been practised for 35 years.

Sleeping car porters "had never been given the opportunity by the Canadian National Railways of obtaining a promotion to that of sleeping car conductor despite seniority, fitness, ability, aptitude and any other necessary qualifications."

The complaint notes that the porters branch has 166 employees, about half Negro and half white. White porters are similarly discriminated against.

Repeated objections to job discrimination had been made to the union and the company before, but to no avail, the complaint said.

Chinese Ignore Meeting

MOSCOW (CP)—Communist Chinese negotiators failed to show up at the Moscow-Peking reconciliation talks today after the Soviet Union fired new charges at Red China and warned of "dangerous consequences."

Western correspondents gathered outside the mansion in the swank Lenin Hills sections of Moscow where the talks have been held were told by a policeman that the Chinese would not be coming.

The correspondents noted the usual signs of preparatory activity at the fenced-in conference site early in the morning.

But at 11 a.m.—more than an hour after the talks usually begin—there was still no sign of the Chinese. Soviet officials began leaving the estate.

AWAITING REACTION?

The Chinese absence aroused speculation that they were awaiting Peking's reaction to a new Soviet attack. Some observers thought the Chinese might call an end to the sessions in retaliation.

The Soviet Communist party organ Pravda today shattered the silence surrounding the talks with a harshly-worded Kremlin statement accusing the Chinese of stirring up further hostility towards the Russians.

The Soviet Communist party central committee accused the Chinese of deliberately aggravating Soviet-Chinese relations at a time when the two countries are discussing ideological differences.

The Chinese militantly oppose Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence policy, underlined by his meeting with Spaak.

The new Soviet party statement denounced speeches at a rally in Peking Sunday in support of five Chinese expelled from the Soviet Union. They had distributed reprints in the Soviet Union of the Chinese Communist party's long denunciation June 14 of Khrushchev's policies.

The Soviet statement said speakers at the rally tended to create "moods unfriendly to the Soviet people, to aggravate the situation in the course of nego-

'DO IT NOW BEFORE THE TAX GOES UP'

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon's revised budget was an "inside" job.

Now Parliament Hill is watching to see whether the product of the civil service turns out to be less of an irritant and more of a balm for the minister and the Liberal government than his June 13 budget on which he had the guidance of three outside advisers.

Some observers suggest that the graduated sales tax may spur buying of the building materials and production equipment to which the tax was applied all at once in the June 13 budget.

"A more effective implementation of the budget proposals," one of Mr. Gordon's aides called it. Other officials here used simpler language: "Do it now before the tax goes up."

Varsity Saves Over $40,000

University and school board officials today welcomed exemption of educational institutions from the 11 per cent tax on building materials.

University Development Board manager Floyd Fairclough expressed "from $40,000 to $70,000 worth of delight" over the decision announced from Ottawa Monday.

Earlier Mr. Fairclough had said the tax would adversely affect the development of the Gordon Head campus.

NEW ROADS

Today he said the exemption would allow access roads to the science building to be constructed. These roads are necessary for the moving-in of science equipment, including the astrophysical dome which is now on its way.

"We might not have been able to put in the roads, our budget is that close," Mr. Fairclough said.

Effect of the exemption will be felt on completion of the lecture theatre adjacent to the science block, as well as the campus "ring road."

Mr. Fairclough said an 11 per cent tax on building materials would have increased the price of a building the size of the library by about $60,000.

BIDS BOOSTED

Greater Victoria School Board buildings and grounds chairman George Curran said the tax would have increased costs of local schools about 5 per cent. It is blamed for recent high bids on school jobs.

He said the price of construction of additions to McKenzie and Frank Hobbs Schools, agreed to recently, would be lowered.

Contractors made provisions for price adjustments in view of rumors the tax might be dropped.

"This will make it easier for us to set up the figures for our new building bylaw, too," Mr. Curran said.

WITHIN YEAR

The referendum for the next three-year building program in the district is to be presented within a year," he said.

Victoria contractors welcomed reduction of the tax in general from 11 to 4 per cent, but felt it should never have been levied in the first place.

And they criticized the "nuisance" caused by it already.

E. P. Hudson, managing director of Stewart and Hudson building supply firm, called the present situation "an accountant's nightmare."

Applied In Three Stages

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon has knocked a $115,000,000 hole in his June 13 budget with a major retreat from its controversial sales tax on building materials and production machinery.

In a Commons statement Monday night that brought opposition jeers, he watered down the 11-per-cent tax to an immediate impact of four per cent and said the full rate won't be applied until Jan. 1, 1965.

He also exempted schools and universities completely from the tax on building materials, and opened a big loophole in his original plan to push foreign-controlled companies into selling a minimum 25-per-cent to Canadians.

It was the second major surgery performed by the freshman finance minister on his maiden budget speech. On June 19 he had lopped off the budget's bold new plan for a 30-per-cent tax aimed at halting foreign takeovers of Canadian firms.

Mr. Gordon made both alterations amid heavy pressure and a deluge of complaints from MPs and the business community. Observers could recall no previous federal budget being so widely changed by the government.

IS IT FINAL?

"Is this the final version?" Opposition Leader Diefenbaker called out at one point during the minister's statement.

Conservative financial critic George Nowlan, leading off a round of comment from opposition parties, said Napoleon's 1812 retreat from Moscow "did not go so far or so fast."

But Mr. Gordon said the changes don't alter the objectives of his original budget, and he told reporters afterwards:

"As far as the government is concerned, this is it... This is the package we have decided to stand on."

Mr. Gordon, in his Commons statement, said the government "cannot accept" pleas to wipe out completely the 11-per-cent tax on building materials and production machinery.

But—amid opposition cries of "chicken"—he set out the legislative plan for a delayed-action tax bite.

The new tax, effective June 14, would be four per cent. It will rise to eight per cent on April 1, 1964, and to the full 11-per-cent rate after the end of 1964. Manufacturers who had already paid the full rate since the budget would receive refunds.

Mr. Gordon described the tax stretch-out and the exemption for schools and universities as "changes of substance."

But he also announced a series of other amendments to ease the impact of budget measures, describing them as "clarifications"—a term which brought hoots of opposition laughter.

He estimated that the changes will cost the treasury $115,000,000 of the $155,000,000 in tax increases imposed by his budget for the current 1963-64 fiscal year. They also would mean the loss of an estimated $125,000,000 of the $455,000,000 in tax increases provided by the budget for the 1963-64 fiscal year.

Mr. Gordon later indicated this will boost the budgetary

AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE GATES

Police Quell Pickets In Greek Royal Visit

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—Police today beat back youthful demonstrators who tried to picket King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece as they entered Buckingham Palace to begin a four-day state visit.

"We aren't provoking violence," protested Kenneth Brown, an 18-year-old student. "We just want to picket the palace."

Sheltered by one of the biggest security guards ever assembled for a royal visit, the Greek royal family had a cheerful and happy reception.

The welcome at Victoria Station was one of the gayest state arrivals ever seen there. There was not the slightest hint of tension as King Paul smiled about him and kissed Queen Elizabeth and all the British royal princesses in greeting.

They saw none of the mild clashes between demonstrators and the police.

The most determined effort to mar the royal arrival was at the side of the palace.

"About 50 of our people wanted to stage a demonstration outside the palace," said 23-year-old Terry Chandler who described himself as chairman of a Save-Greece-Now committee.

"But the police roughed us up and wouldn't let us," he added.

The nearest thing to an incident between the visiting royal couple and demonstrators came in a side street near Victoria railway station.

Screaming "release my husband, release him," Mrs. Betty Ambatielos, British-born wife of an imprisoned Greek sailor's union official was dragged away by the police.

Crying and struggling, she was hustled into a theatre.

Mrs. Ambatielos was demanding the release of her husband who is serving a life sentence in Greece on charges of trying to foster a revolution against the Greek government.

Agitators—including Communists, anarchists, pacifists and other elements—say the Greeks are holding 960 political prisoners.

CRIMINALS HELD

The Greek government says only convicted criminals are being held.

Mrs. Ambatielos, 45, was released after the royal procession passed.

Mrs. Ambatielos figured in a scrap with Queen Frederika outside the queen's London hotel last April. The Queen said she grabbed her by the shoulders.

Admitting the police had foiled efforts to demonstrate outside the palace while the Greek king and queen were lunching with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, Chandler said:

"We're pinning our hopes on tonight. We hope to march on the palace from Trafalgar Square."

As the royal party lunched all was quiet outside. With such a huge security guard it could hardly be otherwise.

Anti-Sub Network To Cover Arctic

OTTAWA (CP)—Vice-Admiral Herbert Rayner, chief of naval staff, said today plans have been made for fixed anti-submarine installations in the Canadian Arctic.

He did not go into details about these installations before the Commons defence committee, but it is understood they will be underwater networks of sonobuoys, detection instruments, to warn of any approach of Russian submarines into Hudson Strait and other channels in the Arctic archipelago.

MAY BE FIRST

He said trials of a prototype hydrofoil boat for which a contract has just been let will not be completed until the latter part of 1967. Canada might be the first country in the world to develop an ocean-going anti-submarine hydrofoil.

Cost of production models of a 180-ton hydrofoil would be only $6,000,000 to $8,000,000.

Admiral Rayner said an anti-submarine force like the RCN should be three-fifths surface vessels, one-fifth submarines and one-fifth general purpose frigates to provide anti-aircraft and anti-missile capability.

In a fleet of 40 warships, one-fifth should have anti-air capability. On this same basis, relations between the representatives of the Soviet Union and China.

OTTAWA (UPI)—Soviet fishing trawlers operating in Canadian coastal waters must be considered "a potential menace" in times of hostilities, naval chief of staff H. S. Rayner said today.

Vice-Adm. Rayner, in a statement prepared for the Commons defence committee, said the Russian fleet, which numbered some 500 vessels last year, was "well-equipped for the support or cover of a number of activities of a military nature."

"Their very physical presence would greatly hinder anti-submarine operations," he said.

Times Ottawa Bureau OTTAWA—The B.C. and federal governments are expected to announce Wednesday that they have worked out an agreement under which they will implement a Canada-U.S. treaty for Columbia River development.

B.C. Premier W. A. C. Bennett has scheduled a press conference in his office for 11:15 a.m. Wednesday, while in Ottawa External Affairs Minister Paul Martin is to make a statement in the Commons.

Instant 'Go' on Columbia Big Vote Issue—Bennett

By FRANK RUTTER

Times Legislative Reporter

GOLDEN—Social Credit intends to make Columbia River power development the major issue of the Columbia riding by-election.

Yet, with less than a week to go before polling day July 15, Premier Bennett's big punch hasn't materialized. And at least two of the opposition parties aren't talking Columbia—power, that is.

"The big issue in this election is whether or not the people want the Columbia to go ahead," Premier Bennett said in a Victoria interview which previewed his campaign.

He said the 4,400 voters have four choices:

• Delay with the Liberals of the project for U.S. treaty renegotiation;

• Plain delay with the Conservatives;

• A completely different development plan with the New Democrats which would flood their riding's rich valley;

• Instant Columbia "go" with Social Credit.

Liberal Leader Ray Perrault is not talking about the Columbia. Although federal Resources

Minist Arthur Laing will be in by-election country at Radium Thursday, Mr. Perrault says it "would not be appropriate" for him to deal with the Columbia treaty because it is "still under negotiation."

NDP Leader Robert Strachan, who has been campaigning this 200-mile riding since July 3, says he doesn't believe the Columbia River is much of an issue because the area will feel only side effects of the big project.

Conservative Leader Dave Fulton, also already in full swing here, still expressed doubt that B.C. and Ottawa

Arthur Mayse

As darkness settled over Victoria on Friday night, a polite but very tough police dog by the name of Royal Mounty stopped by with an invitation to accompany him on his rounds.

Mounty works for Western Home Guard Patrol Ltd., an agency with which 900 householders and 140 businesses in Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Victoria City and Langford supplement their regular police protection. This two-year-old outfit accomplishes with five radio cars, 14 men directed by company president Earl H. Lehna, and eight male German shepherds.

Most of Mr. Lehna's operators have had auxiliary police school training. They wear uniforms but carry no guns. As Mounty demonstrated to me before the night was over, he's a more potent weapon than any revolver.

Superbly schooled by head patrolman and dog trainer George Barr, 28, Mounty is a safer company than the average house pet. But a word or signal from his master will transform him into a fanged projectile that shoots around corners, over fences and down dark stairs to home on his target.

This spectacle I didn't witness Friday night, since crime remained disappointingly torpid on our beat. But during the last year, Earl Lehna tells me, Mounty and his companions have flushed out and halted more than 70 thieves, peeping toms and prowlers.

Patrols can apprehend, George Barr explained as we walked toward his little black car with the company shield on its flank, but they aren't empowered to make arrests. That's left to the police officer who takes charge of a bad guy generally so scared that he can't even come up with phony name or alibi.

In the half-screened rear compartment, Mounty sat quiet, but with ears alertly pricked. "Friend," George said as he opened the passenger door. I got in, and we drove downtown with Mounty discreetly snuffing the back of my neck.

We checked a wharf and warehouse area on the Inner Harbor. Working to hand signals, Mounty covered each murky nook and cranny. George checked the warehouse door. He carried a flashlight, but used it sparingly.

"We got a prowler in here among the crates a while back," he said casually. "Another time, Mounty barked for me from the edge of the dock. He'd spotted a body against the piles."

Inspections are staggered. The would-be thief watching from some vantage point till the patrol pulled out night minutes later find Mounty lunging at him from some pit of darkness.

We came up off the dock, George briefing me as we continued our stop-go progress. He trains search dogs — which, he emphasizes aren't attack dogs unless so commanded — without the use of leg or arm guards. Mounty, Squamish-bred, is six. His jaws have a crushing power of 600 pounds per square inch. So swiftly does he leap into action that only by a fluke could a gunman hope to score on him.

A round of door-testing fetched us to a furrier's store. George chose a key from the ring clipped to his Sam Browne belt and let us in. The place was dim-lit and eerie, the smell of furs strong in the quiet air. Gazed on by mannequins in mink, we threaded dim aisles. Mounty didn't even sniff the bundles of rich pelts in the cutting rooms. He made his rounds in utter silence, finishing off with a tour of the basement.

We worked an office building top to bottom. Someone had left a door unlocked. It yielded to George's sudden push; and on the instant, Mounty was past him, questing the dark interior.

At a large clothing store, George told me, "Wait outside a couple of minutes, then test the latch."

He and Mounty went in by a door around the corner. I waited as instructed, then gave the latch the merest flutter.

It was like calling up a demon. Against the inside glass, level with my chest, appeared a snarling mask that couldn't possibly belong to the dog who had greeted me so courteously an hour before.

The glass between me and that menacing apparition seemed of a sudden very much too thin. I stepped back—a long, fast step—and while groping for a cigarette, pondered something Mounty's master had told me minutes ago.

"A properly trained dog," he'd said, "is worth a dozen policemen."

That's it for today, except to note that Mounty shook hands most amiably before we parted, and that tomorrow we'll prowl a sleeping suburb with another of Earl Lehna's formidable man-and-dog patrol teams.

Is There a New Tennis Champ Among Them?

Anyone for tennis? About 50 youngsters answered the call Monday afternoon in Central Park.

And among that 50 may be tomorrow's champion as Central Park has been the training ground for many of Canada's well-known tennis players.

Gordon Hartley, tennis instructor and director of the city playgrounds program, recalls that Susan Butt, once Canada's No. 1 woman tennis player, started playing in Central Park. John Fraser, formerly Canada's No. 1 junior player and now one of Canada's best seniors, played his first tournament game on the same courts.

These are only two of the champions who started their career in Central Park where free instruction is now being given as part of the summer playgrounds program.

Children ranging from 8-14 years of age were lined up long before starting time.

Although a lob and a smash may have sounded foreign to them on Monday they will be familiar terms when it comes time for the annual playground tennis tournament, Aug. 1-3.

Assisting Mr. Hartley is 16-year-old Natalya Littleton, who is also assistant supervisor in Stadacona Park.

For children in the Victoria area swimming classes started this morning in the Crystal Garden. Tuesdays are reserved for boys, Friday for girls.

Over-all winners will be entered in the national contest, with prizes up to $1,000.

Their winning pictures will be printed in the Times this week, starting Wednesday. Honorable mentions go to Mrs. A. C. Wilson, James Barr, Suzanne Campbell, Mrs. Walter Cook, Brian Hobbs and Vicky Douglas.

Five Escape Market Street Duplex Blaze

Five occupants of a duplex at 751 Market escaped unhurt when a fire swept through the back of the building at about 1 a.m. today.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis West were asleep in the building when their landlord, Bail Kundra, who lives across the street, noticed smoke pouring from the building.

He sounded the alarm and Mr. and Mrs. West and the occupants of the front duplex escaped. Three city rigs extinguished the blaze within half an hour.

The fire started in a wood box that is open to the outside. From there it spread up the wall to the roof. Cause of the blaze has not been determined.

Goodbye Fountain Circle!

Victoria's oft-abused Fountain Circle will be gone by the end of the year, the mayor and special traffic committee chairman predicted today.

Mayor R. B. Wilson concurred with committee chairman Ald. M. H. Mooney after the advisory committee met behind closed doors today, that there would be a new traffic plan in operation at the controversial Douglas-Government-Gorge-Hillside intersection in a few months.

The committee made two specific recommendations to council:

- (1) Purchase a set of standard traffic control signals at a cost of about $6,500.
- (2) Take positive action in implementing a traffic plan for the intersection.

$45,000 COST

"I predict it will be improved and in operation by the end of the year. I wouldn't have done so six months ago," Ald. Mooney said.

"I'm very pleased we've got some definite action. I think we can get a basic plan into operation for about $45,000," the chairman said.

"It looks as though we're finally getting some where," Mayor Wilson said.

Basically, the plan calls for removal of the circle and fountain, extension of the streets and widening in certain locations.

It means acquisition of a slice of land on Hillside to allow for turning movements.

The committee also considered that something will have to be done about all-day parking in the area to allow for freer traffic movement, Ald. Mooney said.

Reconstructed Rose Street as a north-south artery is expected to come into its own when actual reconstruction of the circle intersection is begun.

Future plans for the intersection call for conversion to automatic signals, with allowance for one-way streets as recommended in a former plan, the Faustman Report on Victoria traffic, prepared at a cost of $16,000 in 1956.

Pre-demolition work on two old buildings at Broad and Pandora was under way today.

The two-storey buildings are the next to go to make way for Victoria Centennial Square development.

Hearing Assured Ferry Man

The B.C. Civil Service Commission is "working on" setting up an appeal hearing for former B.C. Ferry Nainimo terminal manager Jack Washer, commission chairman Dr. Hugh Morrison's office said today.

A spokesman said Mr. Washer had written a formal request for the hearing, and the request was being acted on. No date has yet been set.

SHORTAGES

Mr. Washer is protesting his dismissal from the service following the discovery of shortages at the Nanaimo toll office.

He was fired for lack of supervision after a secret investigation at the terminal revealed the shortages. A toll collector, who is alleged to have stolen large sums of money was discharged earlier.

Mr. Washer said today he wrote Arthur G. Richardson, chief personnel officer in the civil service, late in June, asking for a hearing. Mr. Richardson advised him by letter a week later to write Dr. Morrison, which Mr. Washer did mailing the letter July 4.

NEW SYSTEM

Premier W. A. C. Bennett indicated Monday there might be a change in the method of collecting ferry tolls.

"If ferry officials can come up with something better I will be done," he said.

He stressed the fact that all toll employees are bonded (the bond sum is $10,000), and he was sure the bonding company had been notified, and would be prepared to make up any amounts of money that were actually missing.

"We believe our employees are honest," he said, "but sometimes, just as in business, things occur."

The premier said inquiry into the Nanaimo situation and toll collection in general was being carried out in "very thorough way."

Topics of the Day

The B.C. government ferry Queen of the Islands started her regular schedule today.

The $2,000,000 ferry was scheduled to go into service last Thursday but ran into trouble on her maiden voyage when a hearing in a propeller shaft coupling failed.

Ferry officials said the "Queen" started from Long Harbor on Salt Spring Island at 6:05 this morning on the trip to Tsawwassen.

She made two stops at other islands en route.

From now on she will leave Tsawwassen for the Gulf Islands daily at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me if a person who feels they have the knowledge, can they write the Grade 12 university entrance exams without having written any of the previous high school exams? I understand this is called "home study" and anyone who does it will be awarded the necessary 120 credits. G.R.

A. Any person over 18 can write these exams. However, if you intend to write with the idea of obtaining university entrance standing it is necessary to have your previous school records evaluated in advance by the provincial department of education. This is done to determine a person's deficiencies in terms of B.C. requirements for university entrance.

At the conclusion of the marking of examinations, an adjudicating committee grants final standing. If a candidate met the requirements in full, this will be indicated on a document which is mailed to him.

A Chemainus man pleaded guilty in Esquimalt magistrate's court today to driving while impaired.

LeRoy Bobroske, 9938 Maple, Chemainus, was fined $250 and had his licence suspended by Magistrate William Ostler. Bobroske hit a parked car when he drove east on Lockley Road shortly before 8 p.m. Monday. When police arrested him he had to be supported.

Bobroske told police he had been drinking wine.

The sales tax reduction announced Monday night by Finance Minister Gordon has led to an immediate decision by the East Asiatic Company (Canada) Ltd. to build a $1,000,000 office building in Vancouver at the corner of Pender and Bute Streets.

In addition, J. V. Christensen, East Asiatic Co. president, told the Times in a telephone interview that plans for a $50,000,000 pulp mill to be built by a subsidiary company at Gold River near Tahsis Inlet, on Vancouver Island, will be reconsidered soon.

Mr. Christensen said his company, the Canadian branch of a world-wide Danish company which has large timber holdings on the island, would have to look at the whole economic picture before deciding on the pulp mill.

Both the attending doctor and the doctor who performed the post-mortem said today that any suggestion that Furbank had been drinking was preposterous.

Inspector Ray Maitland, who handled the police investigation of the accident, said the police "lent no weight" to the victim's statement.

There was no smell of alcohol on the victim's breath, and no bottles or other indications that he had been drinking.

The man was obviously dazed, mildly concussed probably, and had received injuries that would leave him paralyzed from the neck down. He could feel nothing from his limbs," said Dr. James Fiddess, who attended him.

"Anything he said obviously was nothing to go on."

"The injury the man received would render him paralyzed almost instantly. It might lead to his saying something like that," agreed the doctor who performed the post-mortem.

Driver of the other car involved was Kenneth Whittingham, 1610 Earlington.

'Hands Off' Bennett Tells Saskatchewan

Premier Bennett Monday warned Saskatchewan to "keep its cotton-picking hands off our resources."

This sharp slap was delivered at New Democratic party Premier Woodrow S. Lloyd.

Mr. Lloyd issued a statement in Regina expressing grave concern about the effects on the prairies of B.C.'s Columbia River power development.

He warned NDP members would fight it when the Columbia treaty and B.C.-Ottawa agreement go before the House of Commons external affairs committee. He said the B.C. project could in years to come have a serious effect on prairie water supply.

Mr. Bennett made it clear in a Times interview that he considered it none of Saskatchewan's business.

"It is B.C.'s development," he said. "That NDP government in Saskatchewan had better be told to keep its cotton-picking hands off our resources."

Red Ink Turns Them White

By MONTE ROBERTS

While longshoremen continue to negotiate in an effort to iron out a new contract, the always-sensitive shipping industry is quivering a little with strike apprehension.

Vancouver Island ports are still fairly busy, mainly with lumber carriers, but the arrival bands are beginning to look pretty lean.

Ship-owners, understandably, are reluctant to commit ships to an area where complete loading can't be guaranteed. There's nothing a dollar-conscious shipowner dreads more than a partially loaded ship.

As of noon today, there were only seven ships on the pilot board at B.C. Pilotage here, and one of them is the P & O-Orient liner Oriana (see below).

Most shipping men feel the possibility of a strike is remote—but remote or not, it influences the thinking of executives in skyscrapers high above Wall Street.

They remember the last strike, when 18 or 20 ships swung to anchor in Vancouver harbor and the owners sweated red ink.

The 42,000-ton Oriana will make an appearance for the fraternity of waterfront watchers at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday—IF nothing happens to change her plans.

The official party—including pilot, customs, immigration, quarantine, and assorted pressmen—will go aboard via launch at the fairway buoy off Brothie Ledge. Then the big ship will make her leisurely way to Vancouver, passing fairly close to Clover Point, but providing probably the best view off Ten Mile Point.

She's due at 9 p.m. at the mainland, with 1,519 passengers inbound from the U.K., Australia, South Pacific, and Hawaii.

The waterfront watchers will have to stay up late Thursday if they want to see her floodlit hull leaving these waters. She's due to sail from Vancouver at 8 p.m., heading for San Francisco, San Diego, Acapulco and home port via the Panama, completing a 75-day round-the-world voyage.

If you think the fishermen here are perturbed about the Russian trawlers tooling about the west coast of Vancouver Island, you should talk to an Alaskan.

The fishermen in our northern neighbor's territory are mad, mad, mad—not only at the Russians, but also the Japanese.

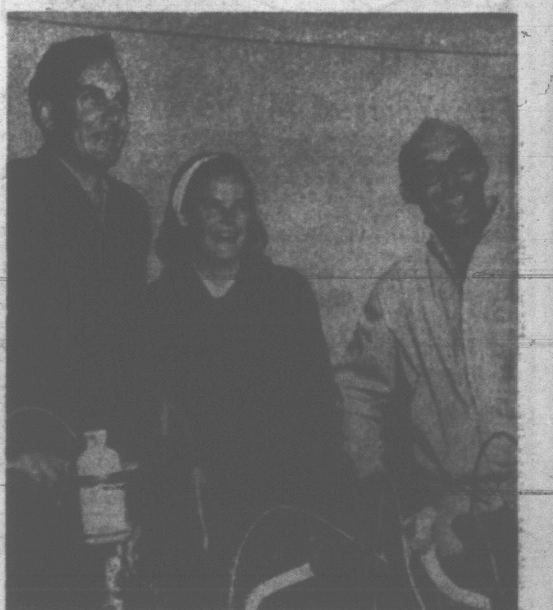

The Alaskans claim they're unfairly dealt with by their own government. They're restricted to fishing in one area only, restricted as to type of gear, restricted as to number and type of fish.

Their Russian and Japanese competitors have no restrictions whatsoever, and drag huge trawls along the bottom, bringing up anything and everything—often including gear belonging to the U.S. fishermen.

The Alaskans say it's a beastly shame, although they don't quite express it that way.

Today's Tourists

All tourists are not Americans. To prove it here are three Winnipeggers who were seen touring the James Bay waterfront on racing bikes.

Airline stewardess Beverly Frances believes there are only three ways to travel—air, bicycle and skis. She flew to Victoria but sent her bike along with Ed Champagne (on the right) and Dave Bonner, who motored west. They camped out along the way and always took time out here and there to do a little cross-country cycling.

Dave is a pharmacist for the Winnipeg Free Press and Ed is a pharmaceutical salesman. All three are enthusiastic skiers. The cycling started as part of a keep fit program for summer months.

In Winnipeg cycling is becoming such a popular sport that the enthusiastic paddlers recently formed a club.

This is a first trip to Victoria for all three. So far they have ignored the usual tourist attractions in favor of the marine driveway. All agreed the waterfront was the most beautiful part in the city—but, "Oh, those hills are so steep," sighed the Prairie tourists.

"One of the first things I noticed in the city," said Beverly is little humanity. "Is the large number of older people living here."

And where is that Prairie sunshine?

that a deliberate campaign is being carried on to aggravate seriously the Soviet-Chinese relations, disregarding the dangerous consequences of this policy.

Admiral Rayner was asking for eight submarines.

CHEAPPR IN BRITAIN

He said the three Halifax-based submarines on loan from the Royal Navy will have to be replaced by 1966 or 1967. Submarines could be built in Canada but it would be cheaper to purchase them from Britain.

The British Oberon class conventional submarine was in production and could be obtained quickly.

Admiral Rayner said the RCN now could "decisively defeat" the conventional Soviet submarine but the nuclear submarine had a big advantage over present and submarine forces.

Russia had more than 20 nuclear submarines and was increasing this force.

"The addition of submarines to our present maritime forces would improve and diversify our anti-submarine capability," Admiral Rayner said.

SHIPS WEAK OUT

Admiral Rayner said the 11 Tribal class destroyers now in the fleet are rapidly wearing out and should be taken out of service by 1970. The 17 Prestonian class frigates were rapidly reaching the end of their economical lives.

At the same time, Admiral Rayner said, Canada has committed 29 warships to NATO's Atlantic Command. One submarine would be counted by NATO as a replacement for one destroyer.

He said the RCN has been hindered from operating in the north by lack of icebreakers and a tanker ship. This situation would improve but the threat to Canada was much greater from the Atlantic and Pacific than from the Arctic. If the nuclear submarine problem were solved in the Atlantic and Pacific, Russia might then station its submarines in the Arctic.

Garden Apartments Opposed By All Candidates in Esquimalt

All three candidates in Wednesday's Esquimalt by-election are opposed to a garden apartment development in the municipality.

Candidates' policies differ mostly in their degree of criticism of the present council.

By-election is being held to fill a council vacancy resulting from the death of Coun. G. K. Sammon in England in May.

Most outspoken critic of the Esquimalt council is Ernest Cassels, president of the Esquimalt United Action Association, and a defeated candidate in the last council election.

He is vehemently opposed to a proposal to rezone 7.9 acres of the old Transfer property north of Old Esquimalt Road so that a 97-suite garden apartment development may be built.

Portugal Recalls Congo Envoy

LISBON, Portugal (Reuters)—The Portuguese government ordered its charge d'affaires in the Congo to leave Leopoldville today following Congolese recognition of a "foreign group" as the legitimate representative of the African colony of Angola.

The group mentioned in the communique is the Angolan "government-in-exile" in Leopoldville.

The communique said that on June 28 the Leopoldville government gave recognition to a group "led by foreigners and paid also by foreign interests, namely not African."

He then broke an egg on Dickerson's head, smeared it about his face and threw a milkshake container of water on him.

has offered Esquimalt council $20,000 for the land if it can be rezoned for the development.

The Esquimalt United Action Association was formed specifically to block the proposal.

Mr. Cassels has said that his group will obtain an injunction if necessary to prevent the garden apartments being built.

"RADICAL GROUP"

Arthur Mebs, who also opposes the rezoning, feels that the council has done "a magnificent job," and is anxious to co-operate with the council.

He calls the United Action Association a "radical group," of newcomers, and feels "they are not going to win many friends."

"These threats to sue before a decision has been made, around the time of an election, make me wonder what Mr. Cassels is really interested in," he says.

WHY SO HIGH?

C. L. Fraser, who also opposes the rezoning, is more interested in finding out why Esquimalt has such a high fire insurance rate.

"I believe a thorough investigation of the fire protection in the municipality is necessary with a view to eliminating the penalty imposed upon residents by the Canadian Insurance Underwriters' Association."

"Esquimalt now has the highest fire insurance rates... of the Greater Victoria area, and must have a recognized fire fighting force."

Polling stations are at the Municipal Hall for voters on Section One of the voters' list, and at 885 Craigflower Road for voters on Section Two of the list.

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Gordon Amends
His Sales Tax

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon has knocked a $115,000,000 hole in his June 13 budget with a major retreat from its controversial sales tax on building materials and production machinery.

In a Commons statement Monday night that brought opposition jeers, he watered down the 11-per-cent tax to an immediate impact of four per cent and said the full rate won't be applied until Jan. 1, 1965.

He also exempted schools and universities completely from the tax on building materials, and opened a big loophole in his original plan to push foreign-controlled companies into selling a minimum 25-per-cent to Canadians.

It was the second major surgery performed by the fresh-faced finance minister on his maiden budget speech. On June 19 he had lopped off the budget's bold new plan for a 30-per-cent tax aimed at halting foreign takeovers of Canadian firms.

Mr. Gordon made both alterations amid heavy pressure and a deluge of complaints from MPs and the business community. Observers could recall no previous federal budget being so widely changed by the government.

IS IT FINAL?

"Is this the final version?" Opposition Leader Diefenbaker called out at one point during the minister's statement.

Conservative financial critic George Nowlan, leading off a round of comment from opposition parties, said Napoleon's 1812 retreat from Moscow "did not go so far or so fast."

But Mr. Gordon said the changes don't alter the objectives of his original budget, and he told reporters afterwards:

"As far as the government is concerned, this is it. . . . This is the package we have decided to stand on."

Mr. Gordon, in his Commons statement, said the government "cannot accept" pleas to wipe out completely the 11-per-cent tax on building materials and production machinery.

But—amid opposition cries of "chicken"—he set out the legislative plan for a delayed-action tax bite.

The new tax, effective June 14, would be four per cent. It will rise to eight per cent on April 1, 1964, and to the full 11-per cent rate after the end of 1964. Manufacturers who had already paid the full rate since the budget would receive refunds.

Mr. Gordon described the tax stretch-out and the exemption for schools and universities as "changes of substance."

But he also announced a series of other amendments to ease the impact of budget measures, describing them as "clarifications"—a term which brought hoots of opposition laughter.

He estimated that the changes will cost the treasury $115,000,000 of the $155,000,000 in tax increases imposed by his budget for the current 1963-64 fiscal year. They also would mean the loss of an estimated $125,000,000 of the $455,000,000 in tax increases provided by the budget for the 1963-64 fiscal year.

Mr. Gordon later indicated this will boost the budgetary

Anti-Sub Network
To Cover Arctic

OTTAWA (CP)—Vice-Admiral Herbert Rayner, chief of naval staff, said today plans have been made for fixed anti-submarine installations in the Canadian Arctic.

He did not go into details about these installations before the Commons defence committee, but it is understood they will be underwater networks of sonobuoys, detection instruments, to warn of any approach of Russian submarines into Hudson Strait and other channels in the Arctic archipelago.

The navy was looking for a cheap anti-submarine vessel

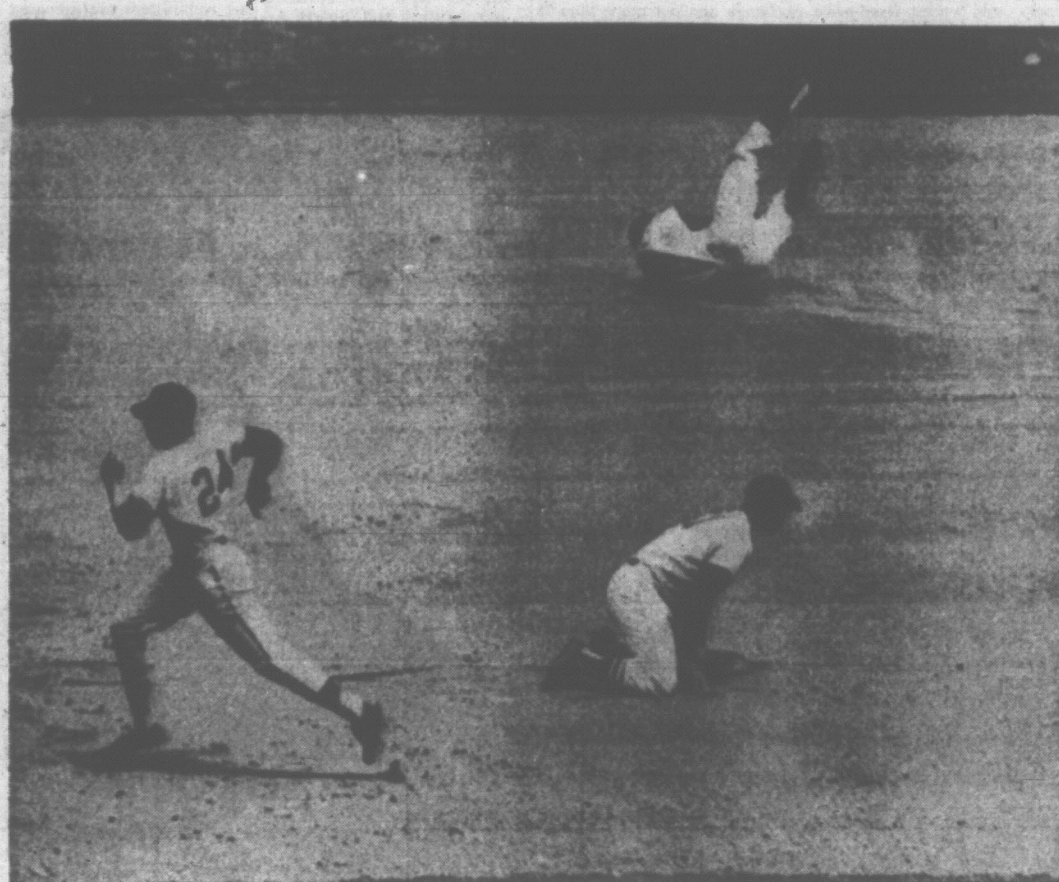

"and we need them in great numbers."

He said trials of a prototype hydrofoil boat for which a contract has just been let will not be completed until the latter part of 1967. Canada might be the first country in the world to develop an ocean-going anti-submarine hydrofoil. Cost of production models of a 180-ton hydrofoil would be only $6,000,000 to $8,000,000.

Admiral Rayner said an anti-submarine force like the RCN should be three-fifths surface vessels, one-fifth submarines, and one-fifth general purpose frigates to provide anti-aircraft and anti-missile capability.

In a fleet of 40 warships, one-fifth should have anti-air capability. On this same basis,

'DO IT NOW BEFORE THE TAX GOES UP'

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon's revised budget was an "inside" job.

Now Parliament Hill is watching to see whether the product of the civil service turns out to be less of an irritant and more of a balm for the minister and the Liberal government than his June 13 budget on which he had the guidance of three outside advisers.

Some observers suggest that the graduated sales tax may spur buying of the building materials and production equipment to which the tax was applied all at once in the June 13 budget.

"A more effective implementation of the budget proposals," one of Mr. Gordon's aides called it. Other officials here used simpler language: "Do it now before the tax goes up."

Varsity Saves
Over $40,000

University and school board officials today welcomed exemption of educational institutions from the 11 per cent tax on building materials.

University Development Board chairman George Curran said the tax would have increased costs of local schools about 5 per cent. It is blamed for recent high bids on school jobs.

He said the price of construction of additions to McKenzie and Frank Hobbs Schools, agreed to recently, would be lowered.

Contractors made provisions for price adjustments in view of rumors the tax might be dropped.

"This will make it easier for us to set up the figures for our new building bylaw, too," Mr. Curran said.

WITHIN YEAR

The referendum for the next three-year building program in the district is to be presented within a year," he said.

Victoria contractors welcomed reduction of the tax in general from 11 to 4 per cent, but felt it should never have been levied in the first place.

And they criticized the "nuisance" caused by it already.

E. P. Hudson, managing director of Stewart and Hudson building supply firm, called the present situation "an accountant's nightmare."

MAYS STARS

In All-Star

CLEVELAND (AP)—San Francisco's intrepid Willie Mays stole two bases, batted in two runs and scored two in the National League's 5-3 victory over the American League today in baseball's 34th All-Star Game.

The Giants' centre-fielder tied Stan Musial's record with his 20th hit—a single in the third—and sent his team in front 4-3 with a run batted in in the fifth. The National Leaguers added an insurance run in the eighth when Bill White of the Cardinals singled, stole second and scored on a hit by Ron Santo of the Cubs.

The victory cut the American League's edge in the series to a single game. The American League has won 17 of the All-Star games, lost 16 and tied one.

A crowd of 44,160 saw the American Leaguers outthrust their rivals 11 to eight, but the Nationals won on bolder play. The Nationals stole three bases and executed three double plays, one to end the game.

BUNNING LOSER

The losing pitcher was Jim Bunning of Detroit Tigers, who replaced starter Ken McBride in the fourth and gave up no hits and one unearned run in two innings. The winner was Larry Jackson of Chicago Cubs, who gave up four hits and two runs in pitching the third and fourth innings.

The highlight of the Americans' play was the fine pitching of Dick Radatz of Boston Red Sox, who struck out five in the eighth and ninth innings.

The National League scored first in the second when Mays walked on five pitches by McBride, stole second and scored on a single through the hole by Dick Groat.

AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE GATES

Police Quell Pickets
In Greek Royal Visit

By EDDY GILMORE
LONDON (AP)—Police today beat back youthful demonstrators who tried to picket King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece as they entered Buckingham Palace to begin a four-day state visit.

"We aren't provoking violence," protested Kenneth Brown, an 18-year-old student. "We just want to picket the palace."

Sheltered by one of the biggest security guards ever assembled for a royal visit, the Greek royal family had a cheerful and happy reception.

The welcome at Victoria Station was one of the gayest state arrivals ever seen there. There was not the slightest hint of tension as King Paul smiled about him and kissed Queen Elizabeth and all the British royal princesses in greeting. They saw none of the mild

B.C., Ottawa
In Agreement

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The B.C. and federal governments are expected to announce Wednesday that they have worked out an agreement under which they will implement a Canada-U.S. treaty for Columbia River development.

B.C. Premier W. A. C. Bennett has scheduled a press conference in his office for 11:15 a.m. Wednesday, while in Ottawa External Affairs Minister Paul Martin is to make a statement in the Commons.

Over the past 10 days the B.C. and federal governments have ironed out minor adjustments in the proposed agreement, a draft of which was first drawn up at B.C.-Ottawa talks here June 3 and 4.

With a joint federal-B.C. agreement, Ottawa will now be free to open up new negotiations with the United States to bring about changes in the Canada-U.S. Columbia River treaty signed in January, 1961.

In the absence of any agreement between B.C. and Ottawa the present treaty could not be implemented. In addition to this problem, widespread criticism of the Columbia treaty negotiated with the U.S. by the former Diefenbaker government led the new Liberal regime to promise to seek improvements in treaty arrangements.

With B.C. and Ottawa now apparently in agreement on implementing the Columbia projects, several more obstacles have to be overcome before any start can be actually made on the hydro-electric and flood-control development of the international river.

Three Obstacles Outlined

First is renegotiation of the treaty with the U.S., second is full-scale examination of the resultant treaty by the Commons external affairs committee, and third will be negotiation of sale price and other terms surrounding disposal in the U.S. of Canada's share of downstream power benefits.

Under the B.C.-Ottawa agreement the federal government is given the controlling hand in ensuring that all treaty requirements are carried out.

A supervising entity to be set up for this purpose will have a majority of members appointed by Ottawa, with B.C. appointing only one.

In addition Ottawa is given the right of final approval over design and specifications of the dams and works envisaged under the Columbia treaty, and is also given an okay over contracts awarded for the building jobs.

The B.C.-Ottawa agreement designates that the B.C. Hydro Authority as the operating entity for control of the water storage Canada is providing the U.S. under the treaty.

B.C. Hydro also is to finance the dams to be built under the treaty.

Federal officials are pleased that Premier Bennett has given in to the Ottawa view that Ottawa must have ultimate control over the treaty developments, to ensure that they are carried out in accordance with the treaty obligations will be assuming.

They take Mr. Bennett's agreement with what they consider their iron-clad control over the treaty developments to be clear evidence that he is now fully behind Columbia development.

A question about a rumored agreement between B.C. and Ottawa was raised in the Commons today by David Pugh (PC-Okanagan-Boundary).

Prime Minister Pearson said External Affairs Minister Martin, who headed federal negotiators in talks with B.C. at the beginning of June, would be making a statement in the Commons Wednesday.

tends to make Columbia River power development the major issue of the Columbia riding byelection.

Yet, with less than a week to go before polling day July 15, Premier Bennett's big punch hasn't materialized. And at least two of the opposition parties aren't talking Columbia power, that is.

"The big issue in this election is whether or not the people want the Columbia to go ahead," Premier Bennett said in a Victoria interview which previewed his campaign.

He said the 4,400 voters have four choices:

• Delay with the Liberals of the project for U.S. treaty renegotiation;

• Plain delay with the Conservatives;

• A completely different development plan with the New Democrats which would flood their riding's rich valley;

• Instant Columbia "go" with Social Credit.

Liberal Leader Ray Perrault is not talking about the Columbia. Although federal Resources Minister Arthur Laing will be in byelection country at Radium Thursday, Mr. Perrault says it "would not be appropriate" for him to deal with the Columbia treaty because it is "still under negotiation."

NDP Leader Robert Strachan, who has been campaigning this 200-mile riding since July 3, says he doesn't believe the Columbia River is much of an issue because the area will feel only side effects of the big project.

Conservative Leader David Fulton, also already in full swing here, still expresses doubt that B.C. and Ottawa
